CLEVELAND - MARSHALL LAW NOTES

SUMMER 1974

NUMBER 3

Carol G. Emerling, CSU Law Alumni Association President, presents Law Librarian Bardie C. Wolfe, Jr. (right) with alumni donation as he gives Dean Craig W. Christensen the library's 100,000th volume.

Library Acquires 100,000th Volume

The Cleveland-Marshall Law Library recently acquired its 100,000th volume. Law Librarian Bardie C. Wolfe, Jr., presented the long-awaited volume to Dean Craig W. Christensen at the annual Alumni Award Luncheon held May 1. At the same time, Carol G. Emerling, President of the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association, presented a $15,000 check and a pledge from the Alumni Association to the library for another $35,000 over the next three years.

The acquisition of the 100,000th volume was made possible through the aid of an $85,000 special subsidy given the Law Library by the University. This enabled the library to purchase 17,000 volumes during the current academic year. Another request has been made for a special subsidy for the coming year.

A Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Collection of Ohio Materials is already part of the library, and the $50,000 Alumni Association donation will go to enlarge it. State law material is an area of the library collection deserving of substantial attention, Professor Wolfe said, and the Alumni donation will do much to strengthen it.

Professor Wolfe expects the Law Library to house 200,000 volumes "by 1985, and hopefully sooner. But we're not merely trying to keep up the volume count for the sake of numbers. We're trying to build a quality collection, one that will sustain curriculum research and provide alumni with materials frequently too expensive for individual purchase." Professor Wolfe suggested also that microforms will play a significant role in the library's expansion. Presently, ten per cent of the library collection is composed of microforms and ten recently-purchased microform readers. "Eventually," Wolfe stated, "the use of microforms will be part of every student's daily routine in addition to expanding the library's capabilities."

Probably the single most attractive feature of microforms is the cost factor. Wolfe stated that most volumes can be purchased on microform for less than one-half the cost of the same material in hardbound copy.

Microforms also will offer the possibility of an excellent research library in substantially less space. The new Law Library of the CSU Law Center which is expected to be completed in 1976 will hold about 175,000 hardbound volumes, but Professor Wolfe anticipates an expansion of this collection by at least 50 percent through the use of microforms.

Duplication of the most regularly used materials is of primary concern to the library. "With a student body of over 1000, the competition for any particular volume is terrific," Wolfe said. Through the use of microforms, one volume of each collection could be readily available to students. All microform readers are capable of reproducing a written page from the microform, enabling students to obtain a personal copy of the materials.

Microforms will also make available research items that are no longer in hard copy and will replace those materials printed on deteriorating paper.

350,000 volumes of legal materials are now available on microforms, and it is predicted that by the year 2,000, 65% to 70% of the collections of law libraries nationwide will be made up of microforms.

New Assistant Deans Named

Dean Craig W. Christensen recently announced the appointment of Professors James M. Douglas and Daniel M. Migliore as Assistant Deans of the College of Law. Present Assistant Deans William Louis Tabac and Stephen J. Werber will resume full-time teaching responsibilities.

Professor Migliore joined the Law Faculty in September, 1973. He was awarded the J. D. degree by the University of Louisville in 1972 and the LL. M. degree by Columbia University in 1973. At Louisville, he served as Editor-in-Chief of the Law Review. He has instructed in the areas of Property, Environmental Law, Poverty Law and Brief Writing. As Assistant Dean for Administration, Professor Migliore will work primarily in the areas of academic standards, student counselling and general administration.

DANIEL M. MIGLIORE

Legal Skills and Analysis. As Assistant Dean for Student Affairs, Professor Douglas' responsibilities will involve admissions, student recruitment, student advising and student activities and organizations.

Assistant Dean for Academic Affairs Carroll H. Sierk will continue to be responsible for class scheduling, teaching assignments, graduate studies and faculty affairs.

Dean Christensen also announced the appointment of Marlene S. Stovicek as Assistant to the Dean. Ms. Stovicek has been Budget Officer for the Law College since 1972. She was awarded the B. A. degree by Chatham College in 1951 and is currently working toward completion of the M. B. A. degree at CSU. As Assistant to the Dean, Ms. Stovicek's responsibilities will include supervision of clerical employees, overseeing administration and maintenance of the law building physical plant, and providing general administrative assistance to faculty, staff and students.

JAMES M. DOUGLAS

Professor Douglas joined the Law Faculty in September, 1972. He was awarded the J. D. degree by Texas Southern University in 1970 and the J. S. M. degree by Stanford University in 1971. During the 1971-72 academic year, he served as a member of the faculty of the Texas Southern University School of Law. At Cleveland-Marshall, he has taught in the areas of Contracts, Commercial Law, Computer Law, Jurisprudence and

THE PASSING OF AN ERA

Raoul Berger, Charles Warren Senior Fellow at the Harvard Law School, visited Cleveland State this spring as part of the SBA distinguished speakers program. After spending a full day lecturing, visiting classes, and conversing at length with members of the law faculty, Professor Berger summed up his impressions for me. He said he was convinced that the greatness of the Harvard Law School turned almost wholly on its consistent capacity to renew itself by attracting some of the most creative talent and finest minds in the legal profession to teach there. I confess I was more than a little proud when he said he thought Cleveland-Marshall had done exceptionally well in this regard on the basis of the talent he detected among members of the faculty.

Sixteen new faculty members have been appointed in the three academic years since I assumed the deanship, and I consider no accomplishment of the school more important to its future than the array of legal talent that we have thus assembled. We have been remarkably fortunate to attract such an extraordinarily accomplished group of new and experienced law teachers. A generation of future law students will be the beneficiaries of our good fortune.

But if we are enlarged by the addition of able new teachers, we are as surely diminished by the departure of accomplished senior members of the faculty. It was thus a heavy blow to the school this spring when we came to the realization that two of our most distinguished and dedicated teachers would retire at year's end from full-time active faculty service.

Charles Auerbach will complete three and one-half decades of service to the school when he joins the emeritus ranks this fall. Although he will continue to teach on a reduced schedule, any diminution in his course offering will be an irreplaceable loss to the studentbody. He is a master of the art of teaching in the grand manner. He is a symbol of continuity by sorting out the best of what is worth preserving and then insisting that it be preserved. He provides a sense of history that is all too rare in today's law classroom.

Howard Oleck was Cleveland-Marshall's first full-time faculty member. In the eighteen years since he assumed that role, he has epitomized the restlessness of the school's aspirations for excellence. He has always been slightly impatient, even angry, at the pace of things. No matter what achievement, what new success, he has never smiled contentedly. He has always said, why not more, and then pressed onward. No person deserves more credit than Howard Oleck for bringing Cleveland-Marshall into the academic mainstream of legal education. Whether under his leadership or his prodding with the needle, he has kept the school on the move and we will miss him in that familiar role.

The retirement of these two giants marks the passing of an era for the school. I am certain that the potential for our future is a bright one and have no doubt as to the capabilities of the faculty who will see it realized. They will not, however, quite replace what we have lost with the departure of Charles Auerbach and Howard Oleck.

Senior Convocation

One hundred ninety-seven Cleveland-Marshall law students were awarded the J. D. degree at University commencement ceremonies held Sunday, June 9, at Public Auditorium. The 113 day and 84 evening students were honored by the Law College the evening before commencement at a special Senior Convocation held in Woodling Gymnasium on the University campus.

The Honorable George J. McMonagle, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Cuyahoga County, delivered the convocation address. Judge McMonagle, a 1930 graduate of the Cleveland Law School, talked to the graduates about the responsibilities they will shortly assume as members of the legal profession.

Dean Craig W. Christensen also greeted the graduates, noting the changes that have taken place in the law school since they began their legal studies. Remarks were also delivered by Dr. John A. Flower, University Vice President for Academic Affairs; Carl F. Noll, President of the Student Bar Association during the 1973-74 academic year; and Sandra Wien, who was graduated summa cum laude and first in the Class of 1974.

All members of the graduating class were introduced and honors graduates were specially recognized. Introduced as graduating summa cum laude were John Stuart Chindlund, Barbara Rochelle Stern and Sandra Wein. Magna cum laude graduates included Donna M. Catliota, Frank John Cumberland, Jr., Edward Michael Farber, Gary Paul Goldstein, Roger Alan Katz, David Stuart King and Sheila Tew.

Kunstler Speaks To CSU Law Students

"It's time lawyers jeopardized themselves." William Kunstler told approximately 200 CSU law students on April 29. Kunstler was the final speaker of the year in the Student Bar Association Speakers Program.

"I had practiced for 15 years and was earning in six figures before I realized it was all worthless. I now work for $35 a week," Kunstler said, illustrating the adjustments he has made while working for "needed change in the legal system." He did admit, however, to keeping some of the proceeds of his speaking tours in order to support his wife and child. Kunstler is presently engaged as defense counsel for two prisoners charged with first degree murder as a result of the Attica prison riots and for those indicted in the recent takeover of Wounded Knee, South Dakota.

Kunstler emphasized the need for confrontation while stating that "Everything we hold dear, we hold because our brothers and sisters have gone down to the dust for it." He noted the American Revolution and the Civil Rights Movement as examples and called for confrontation in the courtroom and in the streets. "Violence is a political reality," Kunstler said, and added that "the most effective means of transportation 2000 years ago was fear — it still is today."

Kunstler concluded that a lawyer's role should be likened to that of the worker/priest who works and lives with the people. He urged students to do the same thing; not to worry about making money but to "take your skills down to the dirty little criminal courts, where our brothers go down day after day, week after week. For the people are the only institution worth believing in."

Three Join Adjunct Faculty

Three Cleveland area lawyers joined the Cleveland-Marshall adjunct faculty in the just-completed Spring Quarter. Louis H. Orkin, Law Director and Prosecutor of the City of Beachwood, instructed a course in Municipal Corporations. Isaac Schulz, a litigation attorney with Squire, Sanders and Dempsey, taught Trial Preparation. David N. Strand, an attorney in private practice and City Councilman for the City of Cleveland, taught Psychiatry and Law.

In addition, Professor John F. Burke, Jr., of the CSU Economics Department, jointly taught a new Law College course in Law, Economics, and Regulation Industries together with Law Professor Alan M. Ruben. The new course dealt with such areas as anti-trust, the Robinson-Patman Act, condemnation law, tariff controls, regulation of insurance and tax incentive law.

WILLIAM KUNSTLER

Students Work To Better Area Environment

Student members of Professor Daniel M. Migliore's course on Environmental Law have spent the past two quarters learning about legal environmental issues by extensive practical involvement in efforts to solve some of northeast Ohio's most pressing environmental problems. Their activities have touched on such problems as construction of nuclear reactors, legislative response to liquid container waste, noise pollution in industry, air pollution, and drilling in Lake Erie.

In the nuclear field, the construction of the Perry Power Plant Project was the principal focus of concern. Students studied and compiled material on nuclear reactors, assisting a group in the preparation of a complaint seeking to have work stopped on the project. Students had frequent deliberations with specialists in atomic energy and Cleveland lawyers who have litigated in this area.

Other class members worked closely with State Representative John Timothy McCormick in support of the pending McCormick-sponsored "bottle bill" in the Ohio legislature. This work concentrated on the environmental impact of drink container litter, the economic measures intended to remedy this problem, and the need for legislative response in Ohio.

Air pollution also received substantial attention from class members. Students, under the supervision of Commissioner Howard Bergman and George Hansen of the Cleveland Commission on Air Pollution Control, examined administrative policy and procedures for dealing with air pollution problems in Cleveland. The student participants attended regular board meetings to discuss proposed and existing remedies.

"The course was a success," said Professor Migliore. "Not only did the students learn more than they would have by staying in the classroom, they served also as another successful venture in the law school's continuing effort to provide public service for the greater Cleveland community."

Professors Honored for Years of Service

Professor Charles Auerbach and Distinguished Professor Howard L. Oleck will retire at the end of the current academic year as active members of the CSU Law Faculty. Professor Auerbach will continue teaching at Cleveland-Marshall on a part-time basis, while Professor Oleck will assume teaching responsibilities at Wake Forest University College of Law in Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Alumni, faculty and members of the community paid tribute to the prospective retirees at a luncheon in their honor on May 20. Professor Kevin Sheard, longtime colleague and once Assistant Dean under Oleck, was the principal speaker in tracing Professor Oleck's many contributions to Cleveland-Marshall. Rabbi Daniel J. Silver paid similar tribute to Professor Auerbach's professional and civic accomplishments. Norman W. Shibley, President of the Bar Association of Greater Cleveland, presented special awards to the honorees in behalf of the Bar Association.

The Law College also announced gifts to two special award funds established in honor of the retirees' years of service on the Law Faculty. The Charles Auerbach Fund, initially established in 1972 by a gift from Professor Auerbach to the Cleveland-Marshall Educational Foundation, was augmented by additional contributions in honor of his three and one-half decades of dedicated service to Cleveland-Marshall. An annual cash prize is given from the income of the Fund to the recipient of the Charles Auerbach Award for the outstanding student performance in the Law of Evidence.

The Howard L. Oleck Fund was established by gifts in honor of Professor Oleck's distinguished record as a law teacher, administrator and scholar. In recognition of his longstanding commitment to scholarly research, income from the Fund will be used to present cash prizes to the recipients of the Howard L. Oleck Awards for outstanding legal writing. These awards will be presented each year for the outstanding legal writing by a student and the outstanding legal writing by a faculty member.

Charles Auerbach was born July 15, 1898 in the Ukraine, Russia, settled in Cleveland when he was nine, and attended Cleveland public schools. He was awarded the B. A. and LL. B. degrees by Western Reserve University in 1920 and 1922, respectively, and was later awarded the Master of Laws degree by Cleveland-Marshall Law School.

CHAS. AUERBACH

Upon being admitted to the Ohio Bar in 1922, Auerbach engaged in the Private practice of law. He began his association with the John Marshall Law School, one of the predecessors of Cleveland-Marshall, in 1939. He served the law faculty as lecturer and later as Adjunct Professor until 1969 when he became a full-time Professor of Law for Cleveland State University.

Auerbach has been President of the Temple Men's Club, member of the Board of Trustees of the Jewish Family Service Association and the Bureau of Jewish Education, member of the United Jewish Appeal National Campaign Cabinet, and Jewish Community Federation representative on the Cleveland Tercentenary Committee. He also served as chairman of the Jewish Court of Arbitration for fourteen years.

His publications include The Talmud: A Gateway to the Common Law and Reflections on Martin Buber. His treatise on Buber, Jewish philosopher and Zionist leader, was the first article by a layman published in the Journal of the Central Conference of American Rabbis (Reform).

Howard L. Oleck was born January 6, 1911 in New York City. He was awarded the B. A. degree by the University of Iowa in 1933 and the J. D. degree by New York Law School in 1938. He received the honorary LL. D. degree from Baldwin-Wallace College in 1964 and the honorary Litt. D. degree from John Marshall University in 1967.

HOWARD L. OLECK

Professor Oleck was admitted to the New York Bar in 1938 and entered private practice in New York City. He left practice in 1941 to serve in the U. S. Army. Discharged at the rank of Major, he returned to New York to serve on the faculty of New York Law School in 1974.

In 1956 Oleck came to Cleveland-Marshall Law School as the college's first full-time faculty member. He twice served as Interim Dean of the law school, and in 1968 he was named by the Trustees as the school's first Distinguished Professor of Law.

Professor Oleck has served as President of Scribes, President of the League of Ohio Law Schools, and Chairman of numerous ABA Committees. He has been a legal consultant to the U. S. Congressional Committee on Foundations, the President's Commission on Productivity, the ABA Committee on the Model Non-Profit Corporation Act and the Philippine Congress Committee for a similar statute for that nation.

A noted legal writer, Professor Oleck's publications include Non-Profit Corporations, Organizations and Associations; Law for Everyone; Law for Living; The Encyclopedia of Negligence; Cases on Damages; and his six-volume treatise on Modern Corporation Law.

LET'S HEAR IT FOR THE LAW SCHOOL AND WOMEN!

We alumni of Cleveland-Marshall have always been aware and proud of the great democracy which has been characteristic of the school's admissions policies. We know that money, social position, and skin color were never barriers to the admission of ambitious, hard-working prospective lawyers. But I feel we have never really recognized the pioneering posture of the law school in its relation to the admission of women students, and the support it has always given its female graduates.

Other law schools puff their foresight and liberality by stating that they have admitted women for almost twenty years. They publish studies of their women students and how they have fared as a result of being blessed with the privilege of a legal education. But we hear too little on this subject about our own law school. That is a pity, because the admission of women is an integral part of the democratic tradition of which we can be so proud at Cleveland-Marshall.

The first woman graduate of whom there is a record at the law school was Judge Mary B. Grossman of the Class of 1912 — and how many law schools can boast of graduating a woman as early as 1912! Next came Rose Cone in 1916, Mariam Strasbourger in 1917, Mrs. Walter McMahon in 1918, and Hazel E. Mountain Walker in 1919. They were all great ladies in whose accomplishments we can take satisfaction.

But these early women graduates were only the first of a steady succession who were welcomed to the law school and permitted to train for the profession they had chosen. There have been sufficient women graduates in recent years that it is no longer a novelty, and that is as it should be. Women have been part of Cleveland-Marshall for so long that their admission is taken for granted.

But in this normal course of events, we have forgotten to pay adequate tribute to this law school for practicing democracy while others were merely mouthing it. Let's not let this omission last another moment. Let's hear it for the law school and its admission policies on women!

Carol G. Emerling, President
Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association

Alumni Elects New Officers

Albert J. Knopp, '61, was installed as President of the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association at the Association's Annual Meeting held June 7 on the CSU campus. Knopp, who has served as an Alumni Trustee for the past six years, is a partner with the law firm of Baker, Hostetler and Patterson. He succeeds Carol Emerling as President and will serve until June 1975.

Also elected officers of the Association for 1974-75 were John Connick, 1st vice-president; Thomas W. Gray, 2nd vice-president; Anthony J. Garofoli, 3rd vice-president; Joyce E. Barrett, secretary. Leo Rossmann was re-elected treasurer, a post he has held since 1957.

Elected Trustees of the Association for the coming year were J. Ross Haffey, Judge Leo Jackson, C. Lyonel Jones, John Lavelle, Judge John M. Manos, John E. Martindale, Judge John L. Maxwell, Lawrence Rich, Gerald Sweeney, Judge George W. White, Marilyn Zack, and Robert Zashin.

Picker Named Distinguished Teacher

Law Professor Jane M. Picker has been named recipient of the CSU Alumnae Association Distinguished Faculty Award for 1974. The award was presented to Professor Picker at the Association's Annual Senior Tea on May 18.

Professor Picker joined the CSU Law Faculty in the Fall of 1972. She is director of the school's clinical program in sex discrimination law and is one of the co-founders of the Women's Law Fund, Inc. Last Fall, she successfully argued the landmark case in which the U. S. Supreme Court held unconstitutional mandatory maternity leave regulations.

In addition to her clinical teaching duties, Professor Picker teaches courses in administrative law and international law.

Yale Prof Visits CSU

Dean Craig W. Christensen recently announced the appointment of Professor Arthur A. Leff of the Yale Law School as Visiting Professor of Law for the Summer Quarter 1974. Professor Leff is perhaps the nation's foremost authority on the doctrine of unconscionability in commercial transactions. His landmark article on this subject published in the University of Pennsylvania Law Review in 1967 is recognized as the leading exposition on the doctrine ever published. Professor Leff's legal publications treat a wide variety of other subject areas as well. His courses at Yale include Contracts, Evidence and Consumer Protection.

Professor Leff's courses at CSU this summer will include a seminar in Consumer Remedies and a course in the Law of Evidence.

Judge Lambros Honored By Alumni

Judge Thomas D. Lambros was honored by the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association as the Outstanding Alumnus of 1974 at the Annual Award Luncheon held May 1. Approximately 500 Cleveland-Marshall alumni and area lawyers were in attendance. Judge John M. Manos of the Ohio Court of Appeals presented the award, and Chief Judge Frank J. Battisti of the U. S. District Court for the Northern District of Ohio was the featured guest speaker.

Judge Lambros, who has served on the bench since the age of 30, was first elected to the Court of Common Pleas in 1960. He was nominated to the U. S. District Court for the Northern District of Ohio in 1967.

Judge Lambros did his undergraduate work at Fairmont State College in West Virginia and was graduated from Cleveland-Marshall Law School in 1952 at the age of 22.

Judge Lambros is presently a member of the faculty of the Federal Judiciary Center in Washington, D. C. He was named one of Ohio's Five Outstanding Young Men by the Ohio Jaycees in 1963 and has served as President of the Ashtabula County Bar Association.

Judge Thomas D. Lambros (center) receives plaque from CSU Law Alumni Association President Carol G. Emerling and Judge John M. Manos.

CSU Holds Fifth Annual Moot Court Night

The Law College's Fifth Annual Moot Court Night was held Saturday, May 4, before an audience of more than 200 students, faculty and alumni in the University Main Classroom Auditorium. Highlight of the evening was a mock appellate court argument by the school's top moot competitors. The case was argued before Judge Wade H. McCree, Jr., of the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, Chief Judge Frank J. Battisti of the U. S. District Court for the Northern District of Ohio, and Judge John M. Manos of the Ohio Court of Appeals. The mock criminal case argued by the advocates concerned a defendant arrested for parole violation and later charged with robbery and murder. The incriminating evidence in the case had been seized through a warrantless search of the defendant's apartment.

The team of Vincent Alfera and David Simon, with Joanne Minarcini as alternate, were judged winners of the argument and recipients of the Hugo Black Award as the best moot court team of 1974. Opposing team members were Douglas Blackburn and Candace Monty with Leo Sharpe, Jr. as alternate. Alfera and Monty were named the first and second best advocates, respectively, and received the annual Dean's Moot Court Competition Awards. Simon and Alfera received first and second place awards, respectively, from the Law Alumni Association for outstanding brief writing.

Lloyd O. Bonsteel, '30, has retired after 44 years in government and private patent law practice. He will continue to reside near Washington, D.C.

Wilson G. Stapleton, '34, Cleveland-Marshall dean emeritus, has established a Sunday afternoon clinic for the legal problems of recovering alcoholics. The clinic is located in Pompano Beach, Florida, where Dean Stapleton moved after his retirement in 1967.

Gordon W. Gray, '35, after 43 years of Cleveland Credit Bureau work (15 years as President of the Bureau and Retail Merchants' Association) is retiring to establish the Gordon W. Gray Company, a consulting service for bureaus and firms involved in credit-related work.

Thomas J. Brady, '57, has been appointed Counsel for the Bar Association of Greater Cleveland.

George K. Herbert, '57, has been appointed Associate Dean of the Graduate School of Social Work at the University of Texas at Austin. He holds graduate degrees in social work from the University of Chicago and Tulane University.

Jack D. Warren, '71 and Robert C. Keeler, '71, have established the firm of Warren and Keeler in Olmsted Township, Ohio, and are practicing in Lorain, Medina and Cuyahoga Counties.

Larry Doey, '73, has become associated with the law firm of Hyman, Hyman, Zagrans and Carrothers.

William A. Hamann, '73, has become associated with the firm of Rippner, Schwartz and Carlin.

Mary A. Lentz, '73, was recently appointed Educational Consultant in School Law to the Ohio Department of Education in Columbus, Ohio.

James G. Todoroff, '73, is employed by the law offices of J. Melvin Andrews in Eastlake, Ohio, and is engaged in general practice in Lake and Cuyahoga Counties.

Dale F. Shapiro, '74, and Sandra Wien, '74, have been selected for the 1974 Attorney General's Employment Program for Honor Law Graduates.

FACULTY HAPPENINGS

Professor Ann Aldrich served as core educator for the Action Training Network of Ohio's project on "Perspectives on Corrections" funded by the Ohio Humanities Program. It was a four month project culminating in a television program broadcast on WKYC-TV's "Dialogue" on Sunday, June 2.

Professor Charles Auerbach has recently published a monograph entitled "Fiction Unmasked: Israel A State — Not A Vatican." The 32-page monograph was prepared by Professor Auerbach for the Jewish Welfare Federation and has been submitted to Simcha Dinitz, the Israeli Ambassador to the United States.

Professor Hyman Cohen was honored recently by the Bar Association of Greater Cleveland for his service as Chairman of the Association's Labor Law Committee. At a dinner held May 14, Professor Cohen was lauded for his efforts in arranging the Association's successful conference on occupational health and safety.

Professor Gordon Friedman served as panel moderator at the workshop on Health Rights of Women sponsored by the Ohio American Civil Liberties Union at a Women's Rights Symposium held at Kent State University last April 27.

Assistant Dean Daniel M. Migliore participated in a panel discussion on the direction and social responsiveness of Cleveland-Marshall in a broadcast on WERE radio May 8.

Professor Lizabeth Moody spoke in connection with the Distinguished Visitors Forum at the University of Buffalo College of Law last April 28.

Professor Jane M. Picker was recently appointed to the Governor's Task Force on Credit for Women. On April 11 she testified before the Civil Service Study Commission of the State of Ohio on "The Impact of Veterans' Preference Systems on Employment Opportunities for Women" and on May 19 she appeared on WKYC-TV's "Montage — More Than Wives and Mothers." Professor Picker presented "The Mandatory Maternity Leave Case: LaFleur" for a Women and the Law Seminar co-sponsored by the Michigan Trial Lawyers and the Women Lawyers Association in Detroit on May 24. She also has recently delivered speeches at Harvard Law School, St. Louis University Law School and Swarthmore College.

Professor Kevin Sheard addressed the Cleveland Society of Poles on the subject of impeachment on May 2. He is also giving a course in the new Ohio Criminal Code for seniors who completed their work in criminal law prior to the effective date of the new code.

Assistant Dean Carroll H. Sierk was on the program at the Delta Theta Phi Law Fraternity Annual Founders Day Banquet on May 16 in two capacities — as Bailiff on the Cleveland Alumni Senate and Secretary-Treasurer of the William H. Thomas Foundation.

Professor Samuel Sonenfield was named President-elect of the League of Ohio Law Schools at the annual meeting of the League held at Burr Oak State Park on May 3 and 4.
