Business Ethics Resources on the Internet

Scott Andrew Yetmar

ABSTRACT. There are an abundance of business ethics resources on the Internet. This paper details Internet resources with the following categories: Ethics Associations and Institutes, Ethics Journals, University Ethics Centers, Business Professions' Code of Conduct, Business Codes of Conduct, and Ethics Cases.

KEY WORDS: associations, cases, centers, codes of conduct, ethics resources, journals, institutes, Internet, web addresses, World Wide Web

Introduction

The following websites are useful for researchers in the area of business ethics. An exhaustive search was made using the Google and Yahoo directories. Each website was examined in detail for its worthiness. This is not to say that the following is all encompassing. There may be other valuable websites that have been accidentally overlooked. In addition, all the websites do not have the same value.

The following categories were used to organize the websites: Ethics Associations and Institutes, Ethics Journals, University Ethics Centers (United States and International), Business Professions' Code of Conduct, Business Codes of Conduct, and Ethics Cases (mostly free). All websites were accessible as of April 2007.
