Editor’s Note:
We wish to thank alumni and friends who have complimented past issues of Law Notes and who have contributed to the publication through written and verbal correspondence. We hope you will continue to respond to the information in this issue and in future issues of Law Notes.
President’s Message

In reviewing the first half of my term as your President, I am proud of the progress made thus far. Alumni membership and participation has greatly increased; financial support through the Life Membership Program has expanded to 42 enrolled Life members.

I know that, in today’s economy, times are difficult. Many of you support various organizations which you may feel take precedence. The Alumni Association dues structure has been arranged so that full membership is extremely nominal, by all standards. Therefore, we ask you to please support membership chairman Chips Sutula, C-M '53, and Alumni Association goals by returning the dues statement recently mailed to you or the statement in this issue of Law Notes if you have not already joined.

Dean Bogomolny and your Alumni Association are working diligently to establish a good financial base for the law school scholarship programs. A number of law firms have already contributed to the law school scholarship program. Due to government cutbacks this is sorely needed. I am delighted to inform you that several of our alumni are working with us toward this endeavor. Daniel R. McCarthy, C-M '54, heading our scholarship drive; Richard T. Reminger, C-M ’57, and Don Traci, C-M '55, all distinguished alumni, have generously contributed to this cause.

We need increased membership support so that we may provide additional activities and events for the law school students and our alumni. We have planned for you our 2nd Annual Dinner Dance to be held March 30 at the Hermit Club; the Annual Recognition Luncheon honoring the Honorable John T. Patton, C-M ’58, and Franklin A. Polk, C-M '39, on April 12 at the Hollenden House; a seminar on Product Liability and Negligence sponsored by the Alumni Association's continuing legal education department on May 3; and the alumni breakfast to be held on May 10 at the Ohio State Bar convention in Columbus. We had an extremely successful Domestic Relations Seminar under the auspices and leadership of Herb Palkovitz, C-M '68, for which we are most grateful and appreciative.

I welcome alumni input and participation and extend an invitation for you to become involved.

Coming to the Defense of Others

By: Hans R. Veit, Judge, Geauga County Court of Common Pleas

On a warm, summer night your client is leaving the Cleveland Stadium with his son after attending a baseball game. The crowd rapidly disperses, heading their separate ways in the dark night. Your client, carrying the baseball bat he bought his young son, makes his way to the car in the now empty parking lot. Suddenly, a cry for help attracts his attention. Turning, he observes what he believes to be a robbery in progress a few yards away. The victim, a woman, fights valiantly for her purse. A switchblade flashes under the overhead lights. The robber appears to thrust the knife into the victim’s chest.

Your client, reacting to the gravity of the situation, hits the assailant over the head with the baseball bat. He fails to nicely measure the degree of force necessary to repel the attack and the blow administered is hard enough to cause a massive skull fracture. The assailant dies from the injury within minutes.

Your client calls you from the police station, where he has been informed that he is the subject of a murder investigation. You cannot provide the reassurance your client seeks. In your long and extensive career in criminal law, you have never experienced a client charged with murder for coming to the defense of another. Later, your exhaustive research does not reveal a complete defense against the murder charge.

Needless to say, your client, a true good samaritan is bewildered. What should he have done? Should he have looked the other way and pretended he continued on page 5

LAW NOTES
From The Dean...

Medicine, health care and their allied services play an important role in Northeastern Ohio's economy. Greater Cleveland alone has a $1 billion health care industry employing 50,000 in 45 area hospitals and clinics. The City has become an international center for the treatment of cardiovascular disease and is home to corporations on the leading edge of medical equipment breakthroughs. It would be difficult to identify a Clevelander who has not been a direct beneficiary of this area's health care community.

Cleveland-Marshall has a long-standing commitment to the study of legal issues related to health care. Keeping pace with developments in medical/legal issues, the College of Law is about to publish a journal specializing in law and health and will host national scholars to discuss relevant medical/legal issues.

Two of our faculty members, Professor Joel J. Finer, LL.B., Yale, and Associate Professor Sheldon Gelman, LL.M., Harvard, offer courses in law and medicine, forensic psychiatry, biomedical ethics and law, and law and psychiatry. Here current problems of the health delivery system are stressed along with a review of ethics, principles and practices of the interrelated disciplines of health sciences and the law.

These courses have prompted an interest in publishing a legal journal concerning health care issues. The Journal of Law and Health will make its debut this spring. This student-run publication will place Cleveland-Marshall in the company of the large number of law schools which publish two or more scholarly journals.

Co-editors-in-chief of the journal are Karen E. Rubin, C-M '85 and James E. Powell, C-M '85. The publication will be a forum for discussion and debate emanating from the academic, practicing and policymaking sectors of both the legal and medical communities. Topics included in the first issue are: "Patients, Agents and Informed Consent"; "Legal Issues in Creating Preferred Provider Organizations"; "Attitudinal and Legal Factors in Physician Advertising"; and "Medical Authority and Infanticide."

Setting the pace for national discussions of health care/legal issues, the College will host various scholars this spring. Alan A. Stone, M.D., Touroff-Glueck Professor of Law and Psychiatry at Harvard University, gave the 32nd Cleveland-Marshall Fund lecture in February. Dr. Stone addressed the topic, "Judges as Medical Decision Makers." As a visiting scholar, Dr. Stone spent time with students and professors both in the classroom and at informal gatherings.

The topic of the first of our Great Debate series, to be held at the College April 11th, will be "Shall the Insanity Defense Be Abolished?" Professor Norval Morris, former Dean of the University of Chicago Law School and Professor Richard J. Bonnie will be the visiting advocates. Professor Morris is the author of the American Medical Association's position paper supporting abolition of the insanity defense. Professor Bonnie wrote the American Psychiatric Association's paper upholding the insanity defense. In addition, Professor Bonnie assisted in drafting Congressional legislation for the defense.

We hope that those of you who are interested in subscribing to the Journal of Law and Health will contact the editors. Subscriptions for the Journal, published biannually, are available at $15.00 a year. I also invite you to join us at the programs given by the visiting scholars.

Cleveland-Marshall's commitment to the Cleveland community and to mutual issues of importance remains strong and will continue to grow as the College of Law moves toward the next century. Our current interest and emphasis on the interrelated disciplines of law and health sciences is just one example of our active commitment.

never saw the murder attempt on the defenseless victim? And what should he tell his son about the responsibilities of an adult to a fellow human being?

As a matter of law, the courts of Ohio have not defined murder while coming to the defense of another to be a justifiable or excusable homicide. Traditionally, other states have recognized a homicide to be justifiable when it is committed in the defense of another who bears a close relationship to the trigger man, such as spouse, sibling, child, guest, employee or even paramour. However, the Ohio courts have not specifically recognized the defense of others, even when there is a close relationship between the victim and the actor.

In the few cases where the issue has been presented, the Ohio courts have reached a decision on the theory of self-defense. The elements of self-defense are well-known and not necessarily reconcilable to the fact patterns that could be presented when an individual comes to the defense of another. The elements of the defense of self-defense were set forth in State v. Melchoir (1978) 56 Ohio St.2d 15: the trigger man was not at fault in creating the situation; he had an honest and reasonable belief that he was in imminent danger of death or great bodily harm and his only means of escape from such danger was by use of such force; and, he did not violate any duty to retreat.

Why is there such a paucity of precedent in cases involving the defense of others? Perhaps prosecutors do not prosecute people who justifiably kill as...
The Annual Recognition Luncheon

Past and Present

Since its beginnings, the Alumni Association has recognized its importance as a support group for the law school. It has also recognized the outstanding caliber of graduates who represent Cleveland-Marshall.

Beginning 1962, outstanding alumni have been honored for their contributions to society, to the legal profession, and for their accomplishments worthy of recognition by the Alumni Association. With an outstanding roster of prominent graduates in the practice of law, serving as judges, or in the corporate or private sector, choosing an honoree is difficult. Luncheon chairman Terrence L. Brennan, '78, says that “I wish we could select more honorees each year. There are so many deserving individuals.”

Listed below are some of the individuals who have been honored in the past. They express their feelings about Cleveland-Marshall and why they continue to support this fine College of Law and the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association.

THE HONORABLE FRANK J. LAUSCHE, '21
Outstanding Alumnus, 1963; Municipal and Common Pleas Judge; Mayor, city of Cleveland, 1941, 1943; Governor, state of Ohio, 1945 (five terms); U.S. senator (two terms).

“Recollection of my student years at the John Marshall School of Law are tender and uplifting. The evening courses availed me and others with the opportunity of studying law which we would not have had in their absence. At this stage of my life I sorrow in the thought that those who taught me and others who, 65 years ago, studied law with me are mainly gone.”

THE HONORABLE CARL B. STOKES, '56
Outstanding Alumnus, 1970; Presiding/Administrative Judge, Cleveland Municipal Court, 1983; News Correspondent and Anchorman, 1972; Mayor, city of Cleveland, Ohio, 1962; State Representative, Ohio General Assembly, 1962; Assistant City Prosecutor, city of Cleveland, 1958.

“As a past honoree, at the 1970 reception luncheon, I expressed my appreciation to Cleveland-Marshall Law School for having afforded a sound and practical education in law that permitted me to literally begin the practice of law as a sole practitioner immediately following my graduation and certification to the Bar. Almost all of my instructors at Cleveland-Marshall were not only well-grounded in jurisprudence but also in the practical application of the law. My fondest personal remembrance of the school is the personal regard and attention rendered to all the students by our late Dean Wilson Stapleton. He personified the reasons behind Cleveland-Marshall being one of this nation’s finest law schools.”

THE HONORABLE JOSEPH H. SILBERT, '23
Outstanding Alumnus, 1972; Visiting Judge, Ohio Court of Appeals, 1975-81; Judge, Court of Appeals of Ohio, Eighth Appellate District, 1962-75; Ran unopposed for all court positions, 1948-75, Municipal Judge, 1935; Elected to legislature, 1930.

“In 1918, when I began, we met in the Engineers Building on the top floor. Judge Vickery headed the Cleveland Law School. I have seen the school progress from its beginnings to present where it equals any law school in Ohio today. I am amazed and proud of the tremendous progress that I have witnessed in both the day and evening programs.”

Chief Justice Frank D. Celebrezze, '56

“The Cleveland-Marshall College of Law has been a vehicle, in the Cleveland area, for all young people, regardless of their birth and station in life, to gain a legal education if they are willing to work for it. It has provided the opportunity for many ambitious young men and women to become lawyers and to make a significant contribution to us greater insight and understanding of the actual practice of law. It also gave us a role model type of inspiration to accompany our academic training.”

CONGRESSMAN LOUIS STOKES, '53
Outstanding Alumnus, 1970; Congressman of the 21st District of Ohio, 1968-present.

“The tradition of Ohio trial lawyers and judges teaching students at Cleveland-Marshall Law School gave the community. My personal feeling is that I owe my entire career to the opportunity that was given to me by the late Judge David C. Meck and Dean Wilson G. Stapleton.

THE HONORABLE LEONARD J. STERN, '26

“I am grateful to the Cleveland-Marshall Law School for the opportunity to obtain my legal education experience. I am indebted to the legal profession in our state for the confidence and support it has reposed in me in my legal professional endeavors.”

CONGRESSMAN JAMES V. STANTON, 61

“I am thankful for the fine legal education I have received from Cleveland-Marshall Law School, but I am most grateful for the practical education delightfully delivered from men such as Dean Stapleton and Abe Duknik. Their tutorage is not attainable in most academian circles.”

THE HONORABLE JOHN M. MANOS, '50

“I do not have words adequate with which to express my appreciation to the Alumni Association of Cleveland-Marshall Law School for the coveted award conferred upon me a few years ago. I prepared for the law at Cleveland-Marshall Law School, and what I have become relates proximately to that preparation. For the opportunity, I am ever grateful to the law school—one of the finest.”

MAX RATNER, '29

Outstanding Alumnus, 1977; Chairman of the Board, Forest City Enterprises.

“There was no second to Cleveland Law School. A mature student body aimed to get the most lasting results in knowledge possible for the expense incurred. Cleveland-Marshall has directed my career in the business world and has been an influence in every area of success which I have been fortunate to attain. As my social life was successful in dealing with my fellow men, with my community, with making the world a little better by my small contributions, it was due partly to the influence of my legal background.”

THE HONORABLE JOHN L. MAXWELL, '43

Outstanding Alumnus, 1978; Administrative Judge, Domestic Relations Division, Cuyahoga County Court of Common Pleas (six year term); Judge, Probate Court, 1964; Domestic Relations Court, 1964; practicing attorney.

"The officials and the faculty of Cleveland-Marshall Law School are to be congratulated for the great improvements and progress in the development of our law school, thus making it one of the most outstanding law schools in the country. We should all be very proud!"

SAM D. BARTLO, '50

"The success attained and mark made by my fellow classmates and other graduates of Cleveland-Marshall College of Law are testimony to the quality of education being taught at the College of Law."

ATTORNEY GENERAL ANTHONY J. CELEBREZZE, JR., '73

"As a graduate of Cleveland-Marshall, I am acutely aware of the quality of legal education offered to C-M students. By offering a full night school program, Cleveland-Marshall serves an important function by offering legal education to students who must work or who, for a variety of reasons, are unable to enroll in a traditional law school day program. I was deeply honored to be recognized by the Alumni Association in 1983, and I salute this year's honorees."

CONGRESSMAN DENNIS E. ECKART, '74

Outstanding Alumnus, 1984; 97th Congress, Ohio's 22nd District, 1980; Ohio House of Representatives (three two-year terms); assistant Lake County Prosecutor; practicing attorney.

"I always regarded my time spent in study at Cleveland-Marshall as the insurance policy that has allowed me to shape the career I have today. My education at C-M was the soundest investment I have made and I was honored by the Alumni Association's recognition of me last year. At Cleveland-Marshall I learned that we cannot separate education from excellence and we cannot separate education from our future."

THE HONORABLE AUGUST PRYATEL, '42

Outstanding Alumnus, 1984; Judge, Ohio Court of Appeals, 1976, 1982; Common Pleas Courts of Ohio (General Trial), 1973; Common Pleas Court, 1965-1977; Cleveland Municipal Court Judge, 1957; Chief Justice, 1959; Ohio Deputy Superintendent of Insurance, 1949; Police Prosecutor's Office, 1944; practicing attorney.

"I shall always be indebted to Cleveland State University and its Cleveland-Marshall College of Law. They enabled many of us to obtain a good legal education that otherwise would be beyond our reach, because we had to work by day so that we could study law there by night."

Firm Contributions Continue For Scholarship

Law firms continue to support the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law and its goals for purposes of student scholarship. The firm of Reminger & Reminger Co., L.P.A., which employs 32 practicing attorneys specializing in civil defense trial practice before juries on behalf of physicians, hospitals, manufacturers, trucklines, and banking institutions, has made a $7500.00 contribution to be continued on an annual basis.

Richard T. Reminger, C-M '57, firm spokesman, attributes his current success to the night law school which enabled him to work during the day as a personnel and safety director of a major trucking line firm while gaining a legal degree at night. "My course in trial practice and procedure, taught by Judge Artl, and the course in damages and civil procedure taught by William K. Gardner, still leaves a lasting impression on me," he said. Mr. Reminger hopes that the three yearly recipients of his firm's scholarship contributions will benefit in their dealings with the public not only through the fine education they receive at Cleveland-Marshall, but "by way of attitude, attire, and demeanor."

Daniel R. McCarthy, C-M '54, and Edward A. Lebit, C-M '65, spokesmen for the firm of McCarthy, Lebit, Crystal, Kleinman & Haiman Co., L.P.A., announce that their firm has made a $5,000.00 contribution to the law school. "Much of the legal community, both judicial and practicing, has spun from Cleveland-Marshall as well as many of our firm members. We feel a loyalty to the school which has given us the opportunity to be able to practice and we are delighted to support our alma mater. It is our hope that our contribution and continued contributions will afford other Cleveland-Marshall graduates the same opportunity for success," they said.
Life Membership Continues

The Life membership program offers a unique opportunity to support the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law and the Alumni Association. For a total payment of $1,000.00, which can be paid in annual installments of $250.00 each, your name will appear permanently in the law school atrium, Alumni Association showcase. You will also receive a hand-blown personalized reproduction of an antique paperweight.

Membership chairman Chips Sutula, '53, is pleased that response to the Life membership program has been so good and continues to grow. “Support through Alumni membership is essential for the Alumni Association and the law school to continue with its goals,” he says.

If you are interested in Life membership please return the dues statement in this issue with your payment. For further information contact the Alumni office at 216-687-2368.

The Alumni Association is grateful for the following new members:

THE HONORABLE WALTER L. GREENE

“Not only did the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law provide both my father and me fine legal education and the opportunity to make decent livings for ourselves and our families, it provided me the unique privilege of practicing this honorable profession with my father during the last fifteen years of his life.”

NORMAN KAMEN

“Cleveland-Marshall has been a strong bastion for giving people the opportunity of working and obtaining a degree which adds credibility to the individual, whether or not they practice law. The knowledge which I was able to acquire through the night law school program heightened the achievements which I have been able to attain today. The perceptions that are acquired from the study of law have enlightened me in all areas. For this I am thankful to Cleveland-Marshall.”

Alumni Association Welcomes New Attorneys

A happy blend of alumni, faculty, staff, and students joined the Alumni Association in welcoming its newest attorneys into the legal profession. 200 Cleveland-Marshall alumni who passed the July bar celebrated with their colleagues, family, and friends at the October Bar Results Party. Dean Robert L. Bogomolny said he was pleased with the first time passage rate of 90% as he joined the group at this joyous occasion.

The Alumni Association wishes to thank the Student Bar Association officers and students Michele Raig, Lisa Belkin, Jeff Priore, Daryl McCarthy, and Jim Tavens who assisted with this event.

Class Reunions Spark Interest

'64 and '74 alumni gathered for a joint reunion on Saturday, October 20 at the University Club. 20th reunion committee members John Carson Jr., William Coyne, Dom Delsander, George Livola, Jr., Howard M. Rossen, and Shia Shapiro enjoyed mingling with their colleagues over cocktails, dinner and dancing. Chairman Howard Rossen reiterated the group's feelings that "we should reunite more often." Many class members plan to continue their renewed friendships by attending alumni events until their 25th reunion.

'74 reunion chairmen Randy Perla and Stuart Safarin agreed that the effort in organizing their event was "well worth the reward." "Ten years goes by so quickly," they said, as familiar faces passed by or stopped to reminisce. Julie Jason and spouse traveled the furthest distance from their current residence in Greenwich, Connecticut for the event which was enjoyed by all.

Domestic Relations Seminar Well Attended

On December 12, the Alumni Association's Continuing Legal Education Department sponsored its annual Domestic Relations Seminar. This year's speakers included The Honorable Lesley Brooks Wells, C-M '79, John J. Winchester, James R. Skirbunt, Joyce E. Barrett, C-M '71, Robert Zashin, C-M '68, Ramon Basie, C-M '62, Herbert Palkovitz, C-M '68, and Marlene Sundheimer, C-M '79.

Chairman Herbert Palkovitz described this year's seminar as the best ever. "The Alumni Association wants to give something back to its alumni and to the legal community at large," he said. "By conducting in-house seminars, we can offer this unique opportunity." Mr. Palkovitz said that the lawyers who attended and those who participated contributed to the great success of a responsive group numbering almost 200.

Due to a great response, seminar materials were reprinted. A few sets are still available. If you wish to purchase lecture materials, please contact the Alumni office at 216-687-2368.

sailants in the defense of others. Perhaps grand jurors make common sense judgments and refuse to indict in cases where the law calls for a homicide indictment, but the facts indicate otherwise. These reasons might explain why an indictment would not be forthcoming in a fact pattern such as the one presented above.

Let me add some additional facts to the Cleveland Stadium scene. The switchblade that your client thought he saw was nothing but a bracelet reflecting the overhead light, and the person whom your client saved was a willing participant in an amorous struggle between lovers. Suppose your client had been sitting in the bleachers and had quaffed a few beers during the course of the game. He also made an overt pass at the apparent victim and was verbally rebuked by her escort, the apparent assailant. Would prosecutors be more likely to prosecute and grand juries indict?

The defense of others has received some mention in Ohio cases, involving family members coming to the protection of another. In the case of Greger v. State (1927) 27 Ohio App. 272, the Court recognized that a son may justifiably come to the defense of his father and even kill the assailant, if necessary. The court held he could do so, even though there was evidence that the father started the fight, which fact was unknown to the son when he came upon the fight.

Examples of situations where two or more family members are under attack and one kills in defense of himself and the other, can be found in the cases of State v. Sheets (1926) 115 Ohio St. 308, and Sharp v. State (1850) 19 Ohio 379. In those cases, the courts have applied the tests pertaining to self-defense. Based on the fact patterns presented, the test was correctly applied, since the actor was defending himself along with another.

The application of the criteria for the defense of self-defense is inappropriate to the defense of others for the reason that the actions of the accused claiming self-defense are judged subjectively and not by the reasonably prudent man standard. "One pleading self-defense in a homicide case has a right to have the fear which he claims induced him to fire the fatal shot measured by his own physical and mental constitution and not by that of a hypothetical reasonable man.” Nelson v. State (1932) 42 Ohio App. 252. Though the test is subjective, one must still act reasonably and in good faith. Marts v. State (1875) 26 Ohio St. 162.

One can well imagine the problems that could be presented by applying the subjective test to the actions of an accused raising a claim of defense of others. The subjective thinking of self-appointed block watchers may be too far from that of the reasonably prudent man and uncomfortably close to that of a trigger-happy vigilante. The immediate justice administered by such people acting subjectively is indeed a dangerous prospect.

Although there are no reported decisions, it has been suggested that an objective test be applied to the state of mind of an accused claiming defense of others. State v. Moore 429 A.2d 397 (N.J. Superior Court, Appellate Division, 1981). There, the court said that “justification for killing depends on the jury's determination of what it thinks a reasonable man would have done under the circumstances and not upon a subjective exploration of defendant's psyche.”

In other States, courts have treated the trigger man as the alter ego of the person whom he defends. See Corpus Juris Secundum Homicide §108 at page 969. In those States, one acts at one's peril when defending another. If the person defended is actually the aggressor, one would be guilty of murder.

Recently, the Geauga County Common Pleas Court applied the objective test to a homicide claimed to be in the defense of another. The Court also instructed the jury that the trigger man must act in good faith and be without knowledge that the person whom he protected provided the fight. The case involved a shooting incident outside a bar following a brawl inside. The jury acquitted the defendant. It is noteworthy that another jury had convicted his brother, the apparent victim who possibly provoked the fight, of aggravated murder as an aider and abettor, even though the man never fired a shot. In that case, the Court did not instruct on self-defense. See State v. Osborne (1984) Geauga County Common Pleas No. 83 C 1101 (unreported), and State v. Osborne (1984) 11th District Court of Appeals No. 1150 (unreported).

In reversing the conviction of the aider and abettor, the Eleventh District relied on Goin v. State (1889) 46 Ohio St. 457. Goin involves a public fight on election day, and the Supreme Court held that a person on trial for homicide may under certain circumstances aid another in repelling an attacking mob.

It appears that the defense of others is an area of law which requires clarification in Ohio. We cannot simply rely on the good sense of prosecutors or grand juries to return indictments or to refuse to indict. In view of what has been happening on the New York subways and similar possibilities in other cities, we may expect a greater role to be played by vigilantes to curtail crime. Surely, we need to define their rights and obligations.

Obituaries

HARRY C. ZISKIND, '28, died recently of a heart attack at 77. He was commissioner for the city of Cleveland street department and was a founding partner of the law firm of Jacobs, Jacobs & Ziskind specializing in probate, tax, and pension work. He served as a probate court appraiser from 1928 through the late '60's.

NORMAN EPSTEIN, '34, died February 15 at his home after fighting cancer for 17 years.

LEE JONES MULL, '80, died in December of cancer at age 49. She was an active member of the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association and a past president of the Cleveland State University Alumni Association.
About Placement . . .

A number of alumni have recently asked about our very visible on-campus interviewing program that begins in mid-September. They have asked who get interviews and who does the interviewing, among other things. For this reason I'll try and summarize our highly successful program and recap our statistics as of this writing.

Many of you may not realize that Cleveland-Marshall now hosts approximately six dozen employers (firms, government agencies, a few corporations, etc.) over the course of a year. The bulk of these come to Cleveland-Marshall to recruit in the fall—from mid-September to mid-October. Perhaps when you were a law student, the large firms didn't recruit on campus; perhaps a few firms came. Today all that has changed.

No only do all the large major firms recruit second-year students for summer clerkships and third-year students for full-time associate positions, but many of the area's small and medium-sized firms recruit students as well. All the Big 8 accounting firms are represented, and a few of these are now hiring second-year students for a summer of training.

Our students are not only interviewed but are invited back to firms for a full day of second interviews and get numerous offers. (Our wrap-up statistics at the end of the article will confirm this). For those of you who had no on-campus interviewing when you were here, it is of great interest to see so many of our students in the forefront of legal recruiting in this community.

Cleveland-Marshall now also belongs to the Ohio Law Placement Consortium, an organization of all nine Ohio law schools, which holds a two day recruiting conference in Columbus in September. This past year employers in seven states interviewed our students, and second interviews were numerous. Offers were received by 14% of those attending.

To recap our on-campus interviewing statistics, 24% of all second year students were interviewed; 30% of all third-year students also saw at least one legal employer here at Cleveland-Marshall. Of all students applying for interviews, 35% were interviewed. 18% of these students got second interviews. 40% of these students received offers. This total is with 66% of the employers responding to this time. Our statistics will go higher when all the questionnaires are returned.

It is reassuring for Cleveland-Marshall graduates to know that their Alma Mater is reshaping its image in such a positive way. Our present student body is benefiting from the constant exposure to so many diverse legal employers.

Alumni Association Starts Area Clubs

In response to requests for area clubs, the Alumni Association plans to meet with Cleveland-Marshall graduates living outside the Cleveland area. Since our graduates are located throughout the U.S., many have requested names and addresses of other alumni for purposes of fellowship, client referral, relocation, and to share a common bond.

Alumni Trustees Steven S. Slive, '76, and Bessie Cassaro, '65, who co-chair this project, are excited. "With alumni support, the Association has now located many lost graduates. Alumni are enthusiastic about our progress and want to be a part of Cleveland-Marshall as we continue to move forward," they said.

The first club has been started in Columbus, Ohio. A committee has been formed and will meet to establish goals shortly. Their first official event will be as co-hosts with the Alumni Association at the Alumni Bar Breakfast on Friday, May 10 at the Ohio State Bar Convention.

If you are interested in an alumni club in your area, please return the attached form to the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association, CSU, 1801 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio 44115.

☐ I am interested in seeing an alumni club established.

☐ I will serve on the committee to form a club in my area.
