With the coming of a new year it is inevitable that we think back to our experiences during the prior year and to our goals for the future. It is a time of reflection and hope.

With this in mind, it is perhaps proper that we look back on what the Alumni Association has accomplished, and what more needs to be done.

In the last few years, membership in the Association has grown. To meet the increasing needs of our alumni, we have expanded educational programming, such as with our domestic relations and tax law seminars, and have provided additional social activities, including class reunions and the annual dinner dance. Member benefits now include discount life and disability insurance opportunity.

We have also increased the level of services to our members and to the law school. We now have a full-time coordinator to assist the Association and its members and to coordinate our activities with the Law School and its students. Our life memberships, thanks to the generous support of our alumni, will provide scholarships to deserving law students and help to maintain the high quality and reputation of the school. We have begun outreach efforts to establish local alumni groups throughout the country.

But as with any period of growth and change, there have been inevitable setbacks. Some programs and activities have, for whatever reason, not been well attended. In addition, some of our efforts, like attempting to provide low-cost health insurance to Association members, failed for lack of interest. And, despite our growth in membership, enrollment remains below what it should be, given the total number of alumni that have graduated over the years.

All things considered, I believe the coming years will be instrumental in determining what the future role of the Association will be.

Accordingly, the Board of Trustees has authorized a special committee of former Association presidents to meet for the purpose of reviewing our finances and programming and to make recommendations relative to long-range planning.

Additionally, the Board has also authorized me to proceed with the formulation of committees to assist the Board in present program activities. Elsewhere in this issue of Law Notes you will find a list of committees and

For the past several years one of the innovative forms of law school teaching has been clinical education. Clinical education has many different forms but at Cleveland-Marshall it is predominantly a type of clinical education which we refer to as an "in-house" experience. We have a law office supervised by full-time faculty members that accepts a limited number of real cases for indigent clients. The services to these clients are provided by law students enrolled in the clinical course under the direction and careful supervision of qualified faculty.

In addition, we have a judicial externship in which students can work for judges for credit under the close supervision of the assigned judge. There is also a clinical program in Fair Employment Practices.

We are shifting the emphasis in the clinical programs over the next few years. We are going to increase the amount of "simulation" training for students in our course in Trial Advocacy. In simulation courses students are assigned to carry out activities that are like those they would be carrying out in the practice of law. This method has some advantages educationally because we can more carefully control the experience the students receive, but also has disadvantages in that it lacks actual live client contact. We believe, however, that it is possible for us to develop a significant advocacy program which will improve education at the College and give many more students access to what we hope will be a first-rate educational opportunity. In the next edition of Law Notes, Professor Jack Guttenberg, who is heading up this effort, will describe in detail our plans for the Advocacy Program.

In addition to the simulation efforts, we are in the process of expanding our Externship Programs. We hope to place some number of students in law offices under the supervision of practicing attorneys to give them real case experience in controlled circumstances which we believe will be educationally valuable. Examples of placements could include a U.S. Attorney's office, a prosecutor's office, the federal public defender's office, other federal and state agencies where appropriate, and even some private practice opportunities.

Our shift in emphasis will include a closing of our "in house" clinic. We will continue, of course, to run our Fair Employment Practices Clinic which has provided opportunities for students to work on "live" employment cases for some number of years. Although there

by Hon. Joseph A. Zingales

The demand is high, they are overcrowded, the waiting lines are long and sometimes people cannot get in. No, I'm not referring to a resort hotel, but rather to our local and county jail facilities.

The state legislature in its infinite wisdom and foresight has mandated jail sentences for some of the more common and often committed crimes.

Joseph A. Zingales has been a Bedford Municipal Court judge since 1964, and has served as Assistant Cuyahoga County prosecutor and Law Director for the Village of North Randall. He is a 1968 graduate of Cleveland-Marshall.

The offense of driving while intoxicated, for example, requires a minimum consecutive 72 hour incarceration for the second offense, and a minimum consecutive 30 day incarceration for the third offense. In addition, as a result of public concern, many local jurisdictions have adopted a policy of incarceration of offenders of particular offenses such as assault.

The problem arises when the local municipal courts have convicted offenders of crimes which require incarceration. If the offender is convicted under the local municipal code, he must then be housed for the duration of the incarceration in the respective municipal or local jail.

The problem continues when we examine some of our municipal jail facilities. Some of the municipalities, particularly the small communities, have no facilities. They must resort to borrowing jail facilities from neighboring communities—often provided only for a temporary holding period while the individual is initially processed.

We then have many of our local communities who have jails but do not comply with the minimum standards for jail facilities as required by the Department of Rehabilitations and Corrections. Or, they meet the standards for a three-day facility or other minimal time period, but are inappropriate for incarceration of an offender who is convicted of a crime requiring a longer incarceration period.

In addition, all jails must provide facilities for women separate from men, and minors separate from adults. Depending on the classification of the crimes, certain offenders must be housed separately from others.

Because of these and other more extensive standards which jail facilities must meet, our local communities are quite restricted in the number and type of prisoners they may hold, and by the length of time that a prisoner may be incarcerated.

What are the alternatives? Offenders can be charged under the state statute so that the county has the burden of housing them during their incarceration. This, however, does not cure the problem. Our county facilities are extremely overcrowded and cannot meet the demands of our system. This problem will compound itself at the beginning of the new year when the Cleveland House of Correction closes for renovation. They expect to be closed for one year. What will happen to all of its current inmates, as well as newcomers?

Another problem occurs when offenders are charged under the state statutes. Any fines imposed upon the offenders are paid to the state instead of the local community, as would occur if the offender had been convicted under local statute. Thus, the local community has even less funds to try and meet the demand for provision and maintenance of jail facilities.

So, offenders are housed in local jails irregardless of facilities meeting standards. The community receives the revenue, the courts comply with the mandated incarceration requirements, and no one is the wiser. Wrong. The risks of such actions are high. The facility may be closed down or exorbitant lawsuits may be brought by the individual held in a facility that does not comply with minimum standards. These cost are born by us, the taxpayers.

However you look at the problem, it remains the same. Although not resort hotels, there is still no room at the inn.

Alumni Directory: Spring Publication

You should by now have received a phone call from the Harris Publishing Company to verify the information on your alumni questionnaire and to order a copy of the Alumni Directory, if desired.

Publication is expected to be April or May, 1987. The directory will be the most current listing of names and addresses of Cleveland-Marshall alumni, and will provide information regarding the Alumni Association, the college administration and a history of law education at Cleveland State University.

If you missed an opportunity to order a copy of the directory, or if you have questions regarding the directory, please contact the Alumni Office, 687-2368.

More Mugs for Sale

There are more mugs! Response to the advertisement for Cleveland-Marshall logo mugs was enthusiastic, but there are still mugs for sale.

The mugs are full-size, white English ceramic printed on both sides with the law logo in green. We're offering them for sale, $5 each, for as long as they last on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The mugs make great gifts and are a souvenir of your time at Cleveland-Marshall. To order, mail a check to C-M Law Alumni Association, 1801 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland 44115. Allow a few weeks for delivery.

If response is good, we may be able to offer more logo items in the future—Cross pens, duffle bags, neckties, key rings, etc.

1986 Domestic Relations Seminar: Manuals Available

The C-M Alumni Association sponsored its annual Domestic Relations Seminar on December 4, 1987 in the Moot Court room of the College of Law. Sixty alumni and distinguished guests attended the seminar.

The morning session featured Steven L. Rosenberg, Ph.D., who spoke on The Psychologist's Role with Children of Divorce, Daniel Dadich, who presented information on House Bill 509, and James Skirbunt, who addressed Technical Corrections to the Retirement Equity Act COBRA.

Hon. Lesley Brooks-Wells, featured speaker.

space for you to indicate your interest in serving as a volunteer on one that interests you. Please contact Ray Weiss, Alumni Coordinator, for more information. I assure you that the time required will be truly minimal, but your efforts in turn will assist us greatly.

Finally, although coming years will be pivotal, I am optimistic about the future of the Association. The reason for such optimism can be found in the dedication of those who presently serve on the Board of Trustees, and of those who have served in the past or who have helped us in other ways. The Association is the sum of the efforts of its members. It is your association and its future role, in large part, will depend on you.

On a sad note, it is with deep regret that I report the passing of Sam Agnello, who served long and ably on our Board of Trustees. We will miss him greatly—his laughter, his wisdom, his heart. We extend our deepest sympathies to his family.

Obituaries

SAMUEL J. AGNELLO, '68, a partner in the firm of Friedman, Kovacs & Agnello and member of the board of the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association, passed away December 13, 1986. He was a trial lawyer. The Alumni Association extends its sympathies to the Agnello family. He will be missed by all of us.

HUGH P. BRENNAN, '46, a retired judge who served on the Cleveland Municipal bench from 1959 through 1979, passed away in August at age 71.

THEODORE DYKE, labor arbitrator and retired Cleveland-Marshall law professor, died at age 66. He was the husband of Common Pleas Judge Ann Dyke. He was a great favorite of students, who made such a fuss in 1967 when he was planning to take a post elsewhere that he changed his mind.

ELWYNN E. HAUEISEN, '27, died November 11, 1986. He was a retired Cleveland Trust branch manager and member of the Masons for 67 years.

PETER R. MUSSELMAN, '57, chartered financial analyst and former banker, retired in October, 1986 as vice president and treasurer of Case Western Reserve University. He was honored by CWRU trustees, who designated a section of the campus the Peter R. Musselman Quadrangle. He died November 12, 1986.

In Memoriam

In memory of Elwynn E. Haueisen, '27, gifts have been received from Mr. & Mrs. Wilbus Kaplan of University Heights and Elaine Rubin of Cleveland Heights.

Endowing the Future

You and thousands of other people have received many benefits through your contact with Cleveland-Marshall College of Law. Graduates of C-M are to be found throughout Cleveland and the United States in positions of prestige and importance.

To continue to provide quality programs and facilities in the future, plans must be made to insure our College a solid financial future.

An endowment fund places funds in trust perpetually. Only the annual income earned on the fund would be used, thus establishing a perpetual source of income annually. This fund would insure the College's ability to continue, and at the same time, enhance the quality of its programs.

Now, a new way to participate in the future success of Cleveland-Marshall is by making a special commitment to the College through a unique life insurance program.

The Chancellor Series furnishes through life insurance a program of funding the dual institutional priorities of immediate cash flow and long-range endowment. In this program an individual of modest means may make a substantial contribution to the College of Law.

The College will take a life insurance policy on an individual interested in providing a substantial gift at the time of his or her death. The policy is paid by the individual in five yearly installments, and the policy is completely paid after five years. Payments are fully tax deductible. During each of the five years, 20% of the policy premium is returned to the College in the form of an "immediate endowment."

A policy may be as large as the individual desires, but a minimum of $5000. Payments are determined by age and sex, but no underwriting is required and no physical exam is necessary to age 60 and to $100,000. A policy may be purchased by an individual or organization, or for another individual. The application process is short and uncomplicated.

At the end of five years, the policy is paid, but an individual may elect to either continue payments, increasing the eventual gift, or elect to begin a new policy, thus doubling the size of the gift. Payments can be arranged to suit your needs. And, you may elect to cancel the policy at any time.

You can help to insure future quality education and facilities by investing in the College of Law. For more information about this unique opportunity, please call the Alumni Office at 216/687-2368.

Job Placement for Students and Graduates

For the first time, we are using Law Notes to offer Career Planning services to alumni and to seek your help in the placement of our students and graduates.

Our fall On-Campus Interviewing season resulted in a record number of offers to students. However, we project that nearly half of our students will be seeking summer clerkship and associate positions between April and June.

Many of our graduating students, with excellent credentials, have not yet received offers of permanent employment. Almost half of our first and second year day and equivalent evening students will begin seeking summer clerkship positions this spring.

You can help these students by assisting us in identifying firms and organizations interested in hiring Cleveland-Marshall students and graduates. If you foresee an opening and would like to alert C-M students to apply, please complete and return the form below.

Your advice as to placement opportunities will serve the legal community and our student body.
