The Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association has been successful in accomplishing many of its goals. Over the past two years, under the direction of Professor James Flaherty, the CLE committee has presented 32 quality seminars focusing on matters of interest to a large sector of the Cleveland-Marshall Alumni and the general Bar. Our CLE programs have become the model for many other groups and while the format of our seminars has been copied, the quality has yet to be duplicated.

Our 1991 Annual Recognition Luncheon honoring Judge Ann Dyke '68 and Terrance Gravens '77 continued the tradition of well attended and regarded award ceremonies. The Scholarship and Student Assistance Committee awarded its first annual scholarship to ten deserving students from the Law School. The list goes on and on as to the accomplishments of the various committees of your Association.

Yet, as we all know, without the participation and dedication of our alumni, the accomplishments of the past will become faint memories in the future. The leadership of this organization has been successful, in large part, due to the dedication of its membership.

Positions Available

My job this year is not an easy one. As I indicated at the Annual Meeting on June 20, 1991, I have very large shoes to fill as a consequence of the outstanding (emphasis added) accomplishments of Gerald R. Walton '80 and Richard S. Koblentz '75. The challenge for 1991-92 is to maintain the level of success heretofore achieved. Unfortunately, without interested alumni, the lessons learned and the battles fought by my predecessors will have been wasted. The challenge and opportunity exists for each and every alumnus to get involved and make a difference. Regardless of whether you are from the Class of 1991 or the Class of 1941, we need and want your participation. You can be as active as you desire. After all, while we are attempting to accomplish the goals of the organization of helping law students, advancing and improving upon the relationship between the faculty and alumni and providing professional opportunities and legal education for our alumni, we also want to have fun in the process. Therefore, even if you can’t make a significant commitment of time to the Association, please join one or more of the committees or the Mentor Program and do what you can, when you can. Your participation will make a difference and will be greatly appreciated.

Where Do I Sign Up?

For many of our faithful readers, my invitation to become involved is unnecessary. A tremendous number of the people who read Law Notes are already active in the Association and are providing leadership roles in committee work. If you are new to the Association or want to return to the Association, please feel free to contact any of the committee co-chairs identified on page 2. If you want to talk about your ideas privately, please feel free to call me at my office at 781-1111 or in care of Mary McKenna in the Alumni Office at 687-2368.

Conclusion

On a personal note, I would like to thank Gerald Walton and Richard Koblentz for creating a strong Association. This year I have no intention of re-inventing the wheel, but only seeing to it that it keeps rolling along in a successful manner. With the assistance of my Officers, I am looking forward to a fun and prosperous year for everyone. I will do the best job possible to justify the confidence that this Association has placed in me and will hopefully live up to the standards of excellence that have been established by my predecessors.
EDITORS’ NOTE

Message from the Dean

Outreach to Eastern Europe

by Steven R. Smith

It would make quite an exam question: Suppose you want to establish a legal system for a newly emerging country. What legal system would you suggest, and how would you train lawyers for that system?

That, of course, is not a hypothetical question for many of the countries in Eastern and Central Europe. The recently free countries are facing the difficult problem of developing new legal systems. The law schools of these countries are also facing the monumental task of reorienting their education to train analytical advocates, a much more independent and aggressive breed than they are used to producing.

Cleveland-Marshall is playing a significant role in the efforts to share ideas and experience with the emerging democracies of Europe. An initiative by the law school is working with the American Bar Association. The dean of the law school works with the American Bar Association to help establish democracies to rethink their own approaches to legal issues. Thus, we have a great deal to learn from them as well as something to give to them.

Our delegation to Poland consisted of representatives of eight law schools and several ABA officials. All twelve of the law schools in Poland sent their deans or vice deans to meet with the delegation in Warsaw April 18-19. The response of the Polish law schools to the workshop was described by the ABA as "overwhelming." The response of the U.S. delegation was also one of excitement over the possibilities presented in Central and Eastern Europe.

We discussed the efforts to move to a market economy, the changes in the Polish society, and the response that will be necessary from the legal system and legal education. For example, while we were in Warsaw, a stock exchange was opened. There is a strong resistance to regulation in Poland, but the government recognized that in securities exchange there is a clear need for regulation; the 1933-34 U.S. securities laws were adopted, although, of course, the regulatory structure has not yet been put in place. (The Poles have a wonderful sense of irony we discovered over and over—the stock exchange was placed in the building that previously housed the headquarters of the Communist Party.)

There is enormous respect for, and curiosity about, the U.S. legal system throughout most of the area. There is also a recognition that Poland must find its own unique system of laws. We were repeatedly told that they wanted to know not just what U.S. law is, but "how it works." In fact, I think the question was more WHY it works rather than HOW it works. They have learned from sad experience that nice-sounding legal principles have no meaning if people and institutions do not abide by them. The substantive areas of particular concern included "the law of competition" (commercial law generally and anti-trust), environmental law, individual rights, labor law and constitutional law (governmental relationships).

It was apparent to us that several steps should be taken immediately to provide some of the information and assistance requested by the law schools in Poland and elsewhere in Eastern and Central Europe. The law libraries in Poland are in dire need of reform that is taking place. We visited the Warsaw University law library (one of the largest in the country); its entire collection was perhaps the size of the law review collection at Cleveland-Marshall. Not surprisingly, the former government was not overly enthusiastic about obtaining international materials on human rights and market economies. We are, therefore, considering ways to make available quickly basic legal information that legal scholars and the law reformers may need.

We considered several other suggestions, such as the possibility of establishing an American Center in Warsaw at which Polish law students and faculty could review and study American law and legal principles. We also should invite U.S. law professors with expertise in the substantive areas of interest to conduct summer seminars in Europe for our colleagues there. At the same time, deans and scholars from those schools should be invited to the U.S. to see our schools and legal institutions. We concluded that it is essential that continuing arrangements between individual law schools in the U.S. and Eastern and Central Europe be established as "sister law schools" to provide a permanent contact that can respond quickly to requests for information and assistance.

Several of these suggestions are being implemented. The United States Information Agency has approved a grant to fund the initial efforts. A seminar will be held in Salzburg later this summer to which legal educators from around Central and Eastern Europe will be invited.

A year ago in my first Law Notes letter, I challenged the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni to be part of the answer to some of the problems facing our constituency of alumni, students and the Law School — our present, future and common heritage. In reviewing that letter, I have determined that the challenge has been met in a most admirable manner. The Officers, Trustees, Committee Members and Director of the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association are as fine and dedicated a group I’ve ever had the privilege to know and work with. In our efforts, we have developed a synergy that has addressed the concerns of all of our constituents, as seen by a review of our activities.

Our Social Committee has performed a host of activities that have allowed the faculty and staff to meet and renew acquaintances with the alumni in a pleasant, relaxed atmosphere. The Annual Recognition Luncheon, honoring Judge Ann Dyke and Terry Gravens, was well attended and one of the highlights of our year. The presentation of the Dean Wilson G. Stapleton Award, in honor of faculty excellence, to Professor Stephen J. Werber, allowed us the means to show our faculty our appreciation for what their efforts have afforded us — the ability to engage in our chosen profession. Our social efforts have been enhanced by the student volunteers who provided us with needed “hands on” service, while taking the opportunity to meet members of the legal community. More than one student has made his/her initial contact for a law clerk’s position as an alumni party bartender.

Two years ago, Law Notes had been published once in eighteen months. This issue represents the fifth consecutive quarter Law Notes has communicated with our alumni. Through the efforts of our Director and our Publications Committee, Law Notes has grown from eight pages in Summer/1990 to twenty-four pages in Spring/1991. A year ago we wouldn’t have dared to dream that Law Notes would have disseminated this quality and quantity of information to our entire community.

Last year I wrote that our Minority Concerns Committee had addressed a number of issues with positive results. A year ago we saw the tip of a very powerful iceberg. Our Minority Mentor Program has blazed the trail for our school-wide Mentor Program, which will serve all Cleveland-Marshall students this year. Through this committee’s leadership, we have learned that minority concerns are the concerns of our entire community. Many of the issues raised at this committee’s lively and spirited meetings have served as a catalyst for a number of our Association’s activities.

A prime example of this is our Student Assistance and Scholarship Committee. The idea for this committee was born during a discussion of academic standards at the Law School during a Minority Concerns Committee meeting. At that time, no one could have foreseen a program which would provide counsel to students, develop an emergency loan fund to aid students in the event of unforeseen, short-term emergency need, and create and administer our Alumni Association Scholarship Program, which rewards students who have achieved excellence in ways that are not normally recognized.

Twelve months ago, we hoped the Professional Opportunities Committee would “link the needs of our alumni with the desires of our students and recent graduates for legal opportunities and employment”. Not only has this committee embarked upon this task, it has also gone on to operate our Super Saturday Career Day, assist in the selection of our new Placement Director, and spearhead our pro bono efforts. In addition, this committee will be the driving force behind the Mentor Program for the 1991-1992 school year. I am amazed when I realize what this dedicated group has achieved.

As I look back on my year as President, the only disappointment I see is the lack of paid membership from our ranks. I cannot understand, while recognizing what this organization has accomplished and the substantial member discount for our renowned CLE series, how any of our alumni can fail to be a part of this Association, especially with a dues structure that has a top end of $50.00.

In closing, I would like to recognize and thank all of the CMLAA Officers, Trustees and Committee Members for their outstanding efforts. I would also like to express my gratitude to Dean Steven Smith, Jerry Walton and Mary McKenna for their yeoman efforts, and more importantly, for their advice and friendship. Most of all, I would like to thank all of you for the opportunity to serve as President of such a fine Association and for the terrific memories which will last the rest of my life. I can only hope that I have been as good to the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association as it has been to me.

CSU HONORS LAW ALUMNI

Judge Ann McManamon ’50 and Scott C. Finerman ’87 were honored as “Distinguished Alumni” by Cleveland State University at its Annual Alumni Dinner Dance on June 1, 1991. The event, held at the Powerhouse in the Flats, was co-chaired by John J. “Chips” Sutula ’53.

Judge McManamon, of the Court of Appeals for the Eighth District of Ohio, has enjoyed an outstanding career as a jurist. Scott Finerman, the youngest partner at Cohen & Company, also serves as Secretary of the Law Alumni Association, as well as Co-Chair of the CLE Committee. Congratulations to both outstanding alumni.
The Professional Opportunities Committee of the CMLAA has announced the formation of a Mentor Program for all C-M students, commencing with the Fall/91 semester. Committee Co-Chairs Tina Wecksler '85 and Gary Maxwell '88 will oversee a program geared toward enriching the law school experience of our students and easing the transition from law school to the "real world". The program will be divided by classes to give all of our students an opportunity to work with lawyers who will provide guidance geared to their particular needs.

A kick-off reception will be held on September 27 in the Law School Atrium, where mentors and students will learn more about the details of the program while beginning to develop their relationships.

The only missing ingredient is the most important one — YOU! Please indicate your desire to help our students and our profession’s future by returning the tear sheet below or by contacting the following class captains:

CMLAA INTRODUCES THE WILSON G. STAPLETON AND PUBLIC INTEREST LAW FUNDS

At its March meeting, the Board of Trustees of the Cleveland-Marshall Law Alumni Association adopted the recommendation of the Professional Opportunities Committee and created two funds which address the dual goals of opportunity for our alumni and students for employment and community service.

The Public Interest Law Fund will seek endowments through contributions, grants and matching gift programs. The Fund’s mission is to provide legal service to non-profit public interest organizations through the services of a lawyer who will be employed through a grant from the Fund.

The Wilson G. Stapleton Fund will provide funds to supplement the wages paid to student law clerks by non-profit public interest organizations in our community. This will allow those students to earn a competitive salary while performing community service. The Board of CMLAA believes combining opportunity for students with the public good is a most fitting, and overdue recognition to the memory of the man with whom Cleveland-Marshall is identified. The Fund was so well received when it was announced at the Annual Recognition Luncheon on May 3 that the Executive Committee, at its May meeting, approved the awarding of the first grant to Andrew Burr. Andrew, who has completed his second year at C-M, had volunteered at Cleveland Works last year and wanted to work there this summer. The donations and pledges received at the luncheon and special funds raised through Cleveland Works’ efforts allowed Andrew Burr to clerk at Cleveland Works, while earning money necessary to pay for his education.

CMLAA thanks and asks you to join the following alumni who have contributed to these Funds:

Cleveland-Marshall Alumni: Whereabouts Unknown

Finding a former classmate can be just like looking for the proverbial “needle in a haystack.” But not anymore. Soon an impressive directory of our great alumni will be available to help you locate your old friends.

The new Cleveland-Marshall Alumni Directory, scheduled for release in Fall ’92, will be the most up to date and complete reference on over 6,500 alumni ever compiled! This comprehensive volume will include current name, address and phone number, academic data, plus business information (if applicable), bound into a classic, library-quality edition.

The Alumni Office has contracted the prestigious Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc. to produce our Directory. Harris will soon begin researching and compiling the information to be printed in the Directory by mailing a questionnaire to each alumnus/a. (If you prefer not to be listed in the Directory, please contact the Alumni Office in writing as soon as possible.)

The new Cleveland-Marshall Alumni Director will soon make finding a Cleveland-Marshall alumnus/a as easy as opening a book. Look for more details on the project in future issues.

COLUMBUS SATELLITE CHAPTER INSTITUTED

On April 24, 1991, the Cleveland Marshall Law Alumni Association and the College of Law co-sponsored a cocktail reception at the Capital Club for Columbus area alumni. The reception was well-attended and a great time was had by all. Because of the enthusiasm generated by our Columbus alumni, a CMLAA satellite chapter has been formed, with Michael P. O'Grady '80 serving as Chairman. Plans are in the works for membership, social and CLE activities to be held by the chapter. For further information, contact Michael at (614) 466-4510 or Mary McKenna at (216) 687-2368.

WASHINGTON, D.C. SATELLITE CHAPTER RECEPTION

On May 9, 1991, the Washington, D.C. Satellite Chapter of CMLAA held a kick-off party at the Rayburn Building on Capital Hill. Many enthusiastic alumni attended the event, including Hon. Louis Stokes '53 and Hon. Dennis Eckart '74. The chairman of the D.C. chapter is William L. Bransford '75. For further information, contact Bill at (202) 463-8400 or Mary McKenna at (216) 687-2368.
CONGRATULATIONS TO NEW ASSOCIATE DEAN

Solomon Oliver, Jr. has been appointed Associate Dean for Faculty and Administration at Cleveland-Marshall College of Law. He replaces John Makdisi, who has left to become Dean of the University of Tulsa College of Law. Associate Dean Oliver has taught Civil Procedure, Federal Jurisdiction and Trial Advocacy at C-M. He received his B.A. from the College of Wooster, his M.A. from Case Western Reserve University, and his J.D. from New York University School of Law. After graduating from NYU, Dean Oliver taught in the Political Science Department at the College of Wooster for three years prior to serving as senior law clerk to the late Judge William H. Hastie of the U.S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals. Dean Oliver joined the C-M faculty after serving as Chief of the Civil Division and Chief of Appellate Litigation with the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Cleveland.
Oliver, whose publications are in the area of federal civil practice and procedure, participated in a National Endowment for the Humanities seminar at Stanford University during the summer of 1987 on the making of the U.S. Constitution.
This past May he served as a visiting professor at two law schools in Czechoslovakia - Comenius University in Bratislava and Charles University in Prague. In addition to lecturing on the American federal judicial system and meeting with law faculty and administrators, Associate Dean Oliver also met with government officials to discuss major reforms in the country’s legal and judicial system.
We congratulate Dean Oliver and offer our best wishes as he undertakes his new responsibilities.

PAST PRESIDENTS
CMLAA FORMS COUNCIL OF SENIOR ATTORNEYS

The Past Presidents Committee is pleased to announce the formation of the Council of Senior Attorneys (COSA), which will consist of senior attorneys who may or may not be retired from practice. Members will have the opportunity to work with our students and young lawyers as counselors and advisors and will provide guidance for our pro bono program. These volunteers will set their own hours and will be based at an office in the law school.

Our senior attorneys are a great resource and COSA will give these members the opportunity to continue to be productive while still being able to “smell the roses” at this stage of their careers.

William T. Monroe ’53 has agreed to chair the Council and he and the committee are looking forward to an opening meeting in the early fall. We would like to offer this opportunity to interested attorneys throughout the area, whether or not they are graduates of Cleveland-Marshall. Therefore, if you know of any colleagues who may be interested in COSA, please have them fill out the attached tear sheet or contact Mary McKenna at the Alumni Office, 687-2368.

Yes, I’m interested in COSA. Please contact me for the initial meeting.

Pearly Wilson and Gordon Beggs share a common interest in the law. Otherwise their lives are very different. Gordon Beggs has been staff attorney for the Fair Employment Practices Clinic since January of 1991. Before that he was Legal Director of the ACLU of Ohio Foundation. Mr. Wilson, on the other hand, has spent a good portion of his life languishing in various institutions of the Ohio penal system. He has been an inmate of Lucasville Prison, and now he resides in Hocking Correctional Institution, a prison whose inhabitants are, for the most part, elderly men. As unpromising as his life in both these facilities may seem, Mr. Wilson has nonetheless managed to make an indelible impression on the way he and the other denizens of the corrections system are managed by their caretakers, for Mr. Wilson is that strange product of a democratic society which extends opportunities even to those it incarcerates - a jailhouse lawyer. On several occasions, acting pro se, Pearly Wilson has sued the state of Ohio, alleging violations of the rights of prison inmates. A decade ago, he participated in a prisoners’ rights case that was eventually heard by the U.S. Supreme Court: the Lucasville Prison case, Rhodes v. Chapman, which held that a totality of conditions rule would govern these cases. Most recently Wilson found his name once more before the Supreme Court: on an amicus petition filed by the Ohio ACLU and the National Prison Project. That is how his life crossed the path of Gordon Beggs. Beggs was co-counsel in Wilson v. Seiter et al which claimed that living conditions at Hocking violated the cruel and unusual punishment prohibition of the Eighth Amendment.

Mr. Wilson initially sued pro se in the Southern District claiming a number of violations of the Eighth Amendment at the Hocking facility. Among many allegations, his suit charged that dorm spaces at Hocking were cramped, that there were year-round problems with inadequate ventilation and that excessive heat in the prison created a hazard to health. Mr. Wilson also complained that integration of mentally impaired prisoners in the dorms constituted a danger to the other inmates, and he cited as well filthy and unsanitary restrooms.

Wilson’s case was unsuccessful both in the lower court and eventually in the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. In the Sixth Circuit’s opinion, the Court found that Mr. Wilson had failed to demonstrate that these conditions were the result of persistent malicious cruelty on the part of prison officials. It was following the Circuit Court’s ruling that Mr. Beggs and the ACLU became involved in Mr. Wilson’s life. Mr. Beggs and the ACLU contended that living conditions at the prison were inhumane and that deliberate indifference of those charged with addressing these conditions was sufficient to sustain a finding of an Eighth Amendment violation. They argued that this standard could be met by objective proof of a longstanding failure to address unsatisfactory conditions. Wilson’s suit was supported by an amicus brief drafted by the U.S. Solicitor General who argued that the Sixth Circuit had applied the wrong legal standard in resolving the case.

On June 17, 1991, the Supreme Court unanimously reversed the Circuit Court’s decision. The high court supported Wilson, Beggs, and the ACLU in ruling that the deliberate indifference standard used in prison health care cases was an appropriate standard in this case, also, and that there was no necessity to prove sadistic intent on the part of the corrections agents.

Pearly Wilson continues to live out his days confined to the Hocking Institution while Gordon Beggs freely rides his bike every day to and from the Law School from his home in Cleveland Heights. Though the separate lives of the jailhouse lawyer and the civil liberties lawyer diverge in the extreme, they have converged in their regard for the law and their commitment to making it serve the needs of even those who have forfeited their most basic freedoms.
Before dawn’s early light, before student rush hour begins in the atrium, the law school is illuminated by a single night light in the dean’s suite where a professor is busy with his research before drinking the last cup of coffee that will transform him into an administrator. Each day used to start this way at Cleveland-Marshall, but now it is the new morning setting for the University of Tulsa College of Law, where John Makdisi, former Associate Dean of Cleveland-Marshall, has assumed the deanship and will also continue to teach and do research.

Dean Makdisi is a demanding administrator/researcher/professor who expects results, primarily from himself. Affectionately nicknamed “Dean Zip” by his C-M staff, Dean Makdisi is known as the hardest and the easiest person to work with — hardest because he “zips” around all day putting everyone to work, and easiest because even in his zeal he accords respect to other points of view.

Dean Makdisi is the kind of administrator who keeps a firm perspective on the true purpose of the school as an educational institution. He welcomes interruptions on his administrative and research time throughout each day in order to hold conferences with inquisitive, motivated students, and Dean Makdisi is never happier than when his office overflows with animated students, some of whom eventually start to sound just like him.

John Makdisi’s dedication to the academic world is only matched by his devotion to his family. His wife, June Mary Makdisi, former Editor-in-Chief of the Cleveland State Law Review, will continue her law studies at Tulsa. Together John and June Mary provide their four children with a strong value system that promotes the pursuit of knowledge as a primary life goal.

Tulsa would be well advised to synchronize its clocks. To live such a full life, Dean Makdisi is known to calculate aloud the number of minutes a certain task will take. John Makdisi loves academic life and family life too much to waste any minutes.

CLASS OF ’41
50 YEAR REUNION

The Class of 1941 took a trip down memory lane for their 50 year reunion, which was held on June 20 at the College of Law. The event began with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres in the atrium, followed by a fabulous candlelight buffet dinner in the faculty lounge. Paul Hribar was a smashing success as master of ceremonies for the informal program, and tales of the past were told by all. The evening was so delightful that all agreed they would look forward with anticipation to their next gathering in 1996!

DEAN’S COLUMN

It will discuss legal education and fundamental questions regarding the structure of the legal system. The ABA has asked me to participate in that symposium. Seventeen deans from Europe will spend the month of September in the United States to become acquainted with our systems of laws and legal education. Cleveland-Marshall will serve as one of the primary law school hosts for this visit. Efforts are underway to provide to the law libraries basic legal materials in the most important areas of the law. Several faculty have agreed to serve as resource experts. Undoubtedly, new initiatives will be added to the list in the weeks ahead.

Justice Sandra Day O’Connor invited those of us who traveled to Warsaw to have lunch with her shortly after our return. She is on CEELI's Board of Directors and is very interested in the outreach to Central and Eastern Europe. Justice O’Connor expressed the hope that law schools will see the opportunities in the emerging democracies. She noted that U.S. law students will practice in a world that is smaller all of the time, and that opportunities for faculty and students to participate in the legal issues facing other countries will be valuable. In addition, of course, the ideas spawned as new democracies organize their legal structures will provide lessons that we should consider as we seek to improve our own democracy.

Cleveland-Marshall has had a number of international efforts for some time. We have had a continuing faculty exchange with a British law school and a relationship with a school in China. We are exploring other law school-to-law school exchanges. Several of our faculty are interested in comparative or international issues, and we offer a number of comparative and international courses to our students. This is, as Justice O’Connor pointed out, an area that will be of increasing practical importance to our students in the next few decades. The law school needs to continue its

John J. Fry has joined the Cleveland office of Benesch, Friedlander, Coplan & Aronoff as an associate.

After teaching business law for more than twenty years, Mentor High's Ron Rose graduated from Cleveland-Marshall. As his greatest love is teaching, Ron hopes to enhance his career by advancing beyond the textbook level of law. The mock-trial program he established at the high school has allowed students to learn legal issues and become "attorneys". His mock-trial team won the statewide competition in 1989, arguing before the Chief Justice of the Ohio Supreme Court, the Ohio Attorney General, and a member of the ACLU. In 1991, Ron was presented with the Lake County Bar Association's Liberty Bell Award for his ability to encourage greater respect for the law and the Constitution. He lives in Mentor with his wife, Rita and their two daughters. Congratulations!

Wendy L. Zahler has joined the firm of Benesch, Friedlander, Coplan & Aronoff as an associate in the Cleveland office.

First the Faculty...

The College of Law's new Associate Dean Solomon Oliver, Jr., is also a recently elected Trustee of his undergraduate college, the College of Wooster. Dean Oliver spent much of May in Czechoslovakia visiting Comenius University in Bratislava and Charles University in Prague, where he lectured on the American federal judicial system and met with faculty and government officials. Dean Oliver has also recently published an article in the Review of Litigation, "Litigating the Constitutionality of State and Local Affirmative Action Plans."

The Employee Pension and Benefits Law Course which Professor Joan Baker has been planning for some time is now scheduled for Spring Semester, 1992 (6 to 7:15 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays). The primary focus of this course will be the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), as amended, and its impact on a host of employment and business related problems, including collective bargaining, tax planning, multi-employer bargaining arrangements, mergers, acquisitions, leveraged buyouts, plant closings, layoffs, and bankruptcies.

Assistant Dean Jean Lifter, her husband Professor Sheldon Gelman and their daughter Hannah welcomed a new family member, Jacob George, born December 24, 1990.

Deborah A. Geier's article, "The Tax Court, Article III and the Proposal Advanced by the Federal Courts Study Committee: A Study in Applied Constitutional Theory," will be published in July in the Cornell Law Review. Professor Geier also published an editorial comment, "A Teacher's Secret Writing," in The Plain Dealer on Feb. 26, 1991. In it she denounced comments made by state representatives on the education committees who criticized academics for "doing a lot of publishing, a lot of research" and for "getting paid to write books."

Marjorie Kornhauser was a visiting professor at Tulane Law School during Spring Semester 1991.

Victor Streib continues his work on behalf of female and juvenile capital offenders. Much in demand as a speaker, in April he presented a paper, "Avoiding the Juvenile Death Penalty in New York State," at the national death penalty conference. The conference paper will be published in the July 1991 Albany Law Review. Professor Streib will speak before that group again in February 1992 when his topic will be the use of the Battered Woman's Syndrome for female offenders facing the death penalty. That article will be published in a subsequent issue of the Florida State Law Review. In November 1991, he will speak in San Francisco at the Annual Meeting of the American Society of Criminology on "Gender-Specific Issues in the Cases of Death Sentenced Female Offenders, 1973-1991." Finally, Streib has agreed to assist in the defense of a woman on death row in Oklahoma and a 16-year-old sentenced to death for the fourth time in Florida.

Stephen Werber is the new Director of the Law Alumni Association's CLE program. He is also one of the College's most ambitious bikers. In July he will participate once again in the Muscular Dystrophy bike-a-thon from the IX Center in Brook Park to Cedar Point in Sandusky and back, a gruelling 150 mile, two-day round trip. He won't be the only representative of the law school. Judge Lesley Brooks Wells '74 and CMLAA Second Vice President Scott Spero '89 will also be taking to the road with Professor Werber.

Every morning for several weeks this summer, Assistant Dean Louise Dempsey '81 and law professor Dena Davis have begun their mornings with a tour of the intensive care units at the Cleveland Clinic. Together they are taking advantage of an opportunity to refine their interest in health care law by joining the doctors and nurses on their daily rounds. Professor Davis' article "Rich Cases: The Ethics of Thick Description" appeared in the July/August issue of The Hastings Center Report.

Alan Weinstein, Director of the Law & Public Policy Program, has received word that the Gund and Cleveland Foundations have awarded the program over $180,000 to fund a Law & Public Policy Clinic for students interested in careers in the public and non-profit sector. In addition to developing projects for the new Clinic, Professor Weinstein has been visiting historic churches in Philadelphia, New York and Chicago as part of his current research project. Weinstein, who also holds a degree in Urban Planning, is investigating the effect on religious institutions of being designated an historical landmark.

Professor Stephen Gard and Fair Employment Practices Clinic Staff Attorney Gordon Beggs joined in securing an affirmation by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit of a decision by Judge John Manos '50 holding that Cleveland Heights' prohibition of residential political signs violates the free speech clause of the Ohio Constitution. The case, Abby Gross v. City of Cleveland Heights, was decided May 20, 1991. In addition to his work for the Clinic and the Cleveland office of the A.C.L.U., Gordon Beggs serves as advisor to a law student Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship group. The group meets weekly for prayer, fellowship, and study of the Gospel of John.

And Next the Staff...

This year instead of attending the law school's commencement, Reference Librarian Marie Rehrmar had to make an appearance at the College of Urban Affairs' graduation ceremony where she was awarded a plaque commemorating the twentieth anniversary of her status as one of the first CSU graduates in Urban Studies.

Three members of the College's administrative and support staff, Pamela Daiker, Silke Pagendarm, and Laverne Carter, are donating time to two worthy community enterprises: the Rape Crisis Center and the CSU Mentoring Program. When Pamela Daiker '88, Associate Director of the Street Law Program and recent appointee to the Law-Related Education Committee of the Cleveland Bar Association, began volunteering as a legal and personal counselor at the Rape Crisis Center, she was assigned to observe the work of an experienced and highly competent volunteer-counselor — Clerical Specialist Silke Pagendarm. Ms. Pagendarm completed her M.A. in Education in May following a stellar performance on the comprehensive exams. Now, to celebrate, she and her husband Kevin are packing for a vacation in Europe. Laverne Carter, Manager of Faculty and Administrative Services, participates in CSU’s Mentoring Program for undergraduate students who may need a little extra help in adjusting to college life.

In addition to volunteering at the Rape Crisis Center, Pam Daiker is involved in a number of other community efforts. She and Sonia Winner '90, Street Law Staff Attorney, both act as guardians ad litem in the Cuyahoga County juvenile courts. Pam also participates in the Project Friendship Program and is "big sister" to a 13-year-old girl. On a recent visit to the Cleveland City Club, of which Street Law Director and Assistant Dean for Law Related Education Elisabeth Dreyfuss '78 is a past President, Ms. Daiker had a sentimental reunion with Senator John Glenn. Pam was a Senate intern in the Senator’s Washington office in 1982. Sonia Winner and her husband Kevin O’Neill have recently returned from a leisurely week in Paris, their last journey before their baby (class of 2017) arrives in August.

Dean Dreyfuss brought home a suitcase of recollections from her trip this summer across the globe. She paused respectfully at Kangaroo Crossing signs on her way to the National Annual General Meeting of the Australian Section of Amnesty International in Melbourne and visited the section office in Sydney from May 16 to May 22, 1991. Dean Dreyfuss was visiting Australia as a member of AIUSA’s Board of Directors and as a participant in Amnesty International’s Thirtieth Birthday Celebration. With her husband Michael and son John Henry, she also traveled to Western Samoa where daughter Kyle, a Peace Corps Volunteer, is teaching at a Catholic High School in Apia.

While other members of the Street Law staff charted paths across the ocean, Artemus Carter, Street Law’s Student Liaison, headed south toward Tallbottion, Georgia, where 250 members of the Carter family reunited with one another. Artemus reports that the oldest family member present was his 97 year old Aunt Mary.

The Street Law staff are not the only staff members taking advantage of the summer lull at the law school. Cynthia Marizette, Placement Assistant and Laverne Carter headed west in the late spring to try their luck in the Las Vegas casinos, while Assistant Dean Peg McNally lounged on the beaches of North Carolina, and External Affairs Manager Sandra Natran and her husband Joe sunned themselves happily in Freeport in the Grand Bahamas. Meantime Word Processing Specialist Terrie Collier remained somewhat closer to home, visiting friends and family during a church conference in Macon and Norcross, Georgia.

While some of his cohorts in the word processing pool relaxed in exotic hideaways or visited families near and far, Paul Carrington, Business Administrator I, worked on his recently purchased house in Maple Heights. Others such as Secretary/Receptionist B. Michelle Dantzler, who just completed the course requirements for entry into the undergraduate program at CSU, preferred to while away the sunny, lazy days until school starts again.
