

Making Books with Children

October 16, 2012
3:30 PM—6:00 PM

Susan Kapuscinski Gaylord is the author of Handmade Books for a Healthy Planet, Hands-on History: Middle Ages, Super Pop-up Reports for American History, and Multicultural Books to Make and Share. She is the founder of makingbooks.com which inspires educators, librarians and parents around the world to make books with children. Since 1990, she has taught bookmaking workshops to over 30,000 students and 5,000 teachers. As a book artist, she has exhibited her one-of-a-kind and limited edition books nationally and internationally. Her artist books are in numerous collections, including the Museum of Modern Art Library, Yale University Library, and Wellesley College Library. They have been featured in several books about bookmaking including 500 Handmade Books, Cover to Cover, and Handmade Books and Cards.

What can making books do for your students? Motivate them to learn, inspire them to write, and give them the joy of creation. Making books is adaptable, flexible, and fun. In this hands-on workshop, you'll make six different kinds of books using recycled materials. You'll learn how to use them across the curriculum and adapt them for all levels. The emphasis is on ease of construction, simplicity of materials, and a free-spirited approach to the process—no rulers allowed!
