Trustees Weigh $100 Tuition Hike

A jacked-up tuition fee schedule, intended to go into effect with the 1976 fall quarter, was proposed as the January 14 meeting of the University Board of Trustees. However, in a wake of protest by some board members, the fee hike was checked pending a special public meeting scheduled for February 5 at 5:30 p.m., where students, faculty, and members of the public will be able to debate the plan with the trustees.

Broadly, the proposal calls for an increase in tuition fees of $35 per quarter for the majority of law students under the current plan, taking up to 8 hours per quarter would not be affected. Most law students either take eight hours or fifteen hours per quarter.

A comparison of fees paid by law students under the current rates with fees under the proposed schedule is as follows:

The Trustees asked CSU officials to investigate the possibility of cuts in noninstructional positions such as public relations, clerical service and administrative personnel as an alternative to fee hike.

Other proposals approved by the Board included a $150 enrollment deposit for entering law school students. The adopted resolution stated "that as a condition of enrollment, all students entering the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law shall be required to make an enrollment deposit in the amount of $150 with the understanding that said deposit shall apply toward fees required for registration at the college and upon failure to register be forfeited in whole or in part in accordance with a schedule to be determined by the administration."

According to the proposal, this is in order to encourage newly admitted students to deal with the University in good faith. The

Sorrentino To Speak Here Tomorrow

Joseph N. Sorrentino, lawyer, Law professor, Juvenile Court judge, will speak here this Thursday, January 22, at noon in the student lounge.

His topic will be "Up From Never: My Own Story." The lecture is sponsored by the Student Bar Association. The public is invited and there will be no admission charge.

We have gleaned the following facts from his agent's slick brochure: Joe Sorrentino has 25 scars on his hands to prove that he was one of the best street fighters that Brooklyn's tough Fort Hamilton neighborhood ever produced. By the time he was twenty, he had flunked out of high school four times, had been booted out of the Marines and had lost thirty jobs. In 1967, Joe Sorrentino, then thirty years old, was valedictorian of Harvard Law School.

Sorrentino, now a Los Angeles Juvenile Court judge, will no doubt leave few eyes dry after his speech.
Students to interview dean candidates

BY MIKE RUPPERT

The search for a new dean for Cleveland-Marshall will shift to a different level this week, as candidates who have been screened by the seven-member Dean Selection Committee will begin arriving for talks and interviews with faculty and students.

The first candidate students will have the opportunity to scrutinize is John E. Murray, Jr., Associate Dean for Faculty, at Cleveland-Marshall. He will be here January 22.

The next scheduled candidate is the Hon. Jack Day, a judge in the Eighth District. He will be here January 27.

Sheldon Krantz, Director of the Boston University Center for Criminal Justice and Professor at Boston University Law School, is scheduled for January 28.

The Chairperson of the Dean Selection Committee, Professor Thomas Buckley, when asked about student access to candidates during the interviewing process, gave the following outline of the procedure available to the student body:

---Each candidate will have two open meetings with the student body; each meeting will be about a half hour in duration, and they will be scheduled at 1:45 and 3:30, for the convenience of day and evening students, respectively.

---In addition to these open meetings, there will be three non-open meetings for student organizations to interview the candidates in more depth.

Presently, Womens Caucus, BALSA and SBA have requested such interview opportunities.

---The remainder of the candidates' visit to Cleveland-Marshall will be spent meeting with members of the faculty.

---Full resumes for each candidate will be available prior to each candidate's arrival in order that students may prepare questions and get an idea of the candidate's background.

To date, approximately 80-100 names have been suggested as candidates. Indications of interest and availability from these persons have reduced the number to about thirty. Of these, about twelve have been selected as potential candidates for on-campus interviews, according to Buckley.

The Committee began work last October and set as its goal to have a new dean on the job by either summer or fall quarter, 1976. However, the Committee had hoped to have the final candidates selected by Christmas recess. At present, according to Buckley, the Committee is still open to further nominations.

John Lawson, the only student member on the Committee, offered an explanation for the Committee's difficulty in meeting their deadlines. Ten years ago the average tenure of a law school dean was about five to ten years. Today, the average is three to five years. Complicating the search is the fact that currently more than twenty law schools are seeking a new dean.

This week, our Bicentennial TORY OF THE WEEK AWARD is being loaned to HALF A DOzen UNAIIED, WELL-FED FACULTY MEMBERS who, on two recent winter's eves, spent two hundred law school dollars in fulfilling their obligation of dining out with two visiting faculty candidates, and averaged twenty-two dollars per plate in the process.

What more fittingly symbolizes our Bicentennial Bounty than such gracious feeding at the public trough?
Law library gets $15M from university

The University budget committee has approved the transfer of $15,000 to supplement the law school library's troubled budget.

At the urging of librarian Bardie Wolfe, Dean Cohen initially requested the transfer of leftover monies from the law school's administrative salaries budget. The University budget committee rejected this source, believing it more appropriate that the funds come from the University's contingency account.

The additional funds will be used to reinstate some items which have been canceled due to reductions in this year's library budget. Among the materials will be duplicate copies of some reporters, state statutes and law reviews, as well as the recording of some cancelled loose-leaf services.

The addition of $15,000 raises the current library budget for collection maintenance to $85,000 as compared to $84,000 last year. According to Wolfe, this is still inadequate to maintain the library at last year's level due to a 22% overall price increase in resource materials.

The University has restricted the use of the new allocation to the maintenance of the current library collection. It cannot be used for the acquisition of new materials or the expansion of staff and services.
