FRANCES SHEPPARD

Nesbitt was known to friends and family as a bit of a country club type, but to the authorities he was a suspect of great interest.

On the night of Feb. 18, 1926, Frances Sheppard was murdered in her home in Bay Village, Ohio. The authorities were quick to arrive at the scene, and the crime was quickly ruled a murder. But as they dug deeper, they began to suspect that the murder was planned.

The murder of Frances Sheppard was the beginning of a string of murders that would come to be known as the Bay Village murders. The Nesbitts were suspected of being involved in the murders, and the police began to investigate.

The Nesbitts were a well-known couple in the Bay Village community. They were popular and well-liked, but there were rumors of a dark side to their relationship. The police began to piece together the evidence, and it was clear that the Nesbitts were involved in the murders.

The Nesbitts were eventually arrested and charged with the murders. The trial was a long and drawn-out process, but in the end, the Nesbitts were found guilty of the murders and sentenced to life in prison.

The Nesbitts' trial and subsequent imprisonment was a turning point in the history of the Bay Village murders. It was clear that the Nesbitts were responsible for the murders, and the community was relieved to have them behind bars. But the legacy of the Bay Village murders continued to haunt the community for many years.
