X-Ray Readings August 20, 1954

In one of the Cleveland newspapers of Aug. 17 appeared a picture of the four Sheppard osteopathic physicians apparently examining X-ray plates.

In a news article, Dr. Stephen Sheppard was quoted as saying, "A workman had been injured by a sliver of steel which pierced his arm. Dr.

Sam was needed to read the X-rays."

Must we infer that none of the other doctors at Bay View Hospital is capable of reading X-rays? Of course, we cannot forget that Dr. Stephen once diagnosed Dr. Sam's injuries as a broken neck, and later changed his mind.
