Professional Skill Not Involved

I'm getting awfully sick of people finding excuses for Dr. Sheppard. Patients writing in and saying he couldn't have done it, he's such a good doctor. What in heaven's name has that got to do with it?

Granted, Dr. Sheppard is a good doctor, as are his father and brothers.

Now his brother says, "Maybe he did go out with Sue Hayes. What else could he do in the evening—twiddle his thumbs?" Condoning such action is really getting bad.

Stop feeling sorry for Dr. Sheppard—instead save a little pity for that little son of his.

Granted also, that a man is innocent until proven guilty. You would think that if a man loved his wife, he would do everything in his power to help the police, including taking a lie detector test and a truth serum test.

What's the matter, Dr. Sheppard?

MARGARET SIEDLECKI, 121 Talbot Dr., Bedford.
