How Criminal Activity Nuisance Laws Can Hurt Victims of Domestic Violence

Joseph Mead
Cleveland State University, j.mead@csuohio.edu

Marissa Pappas
mkpappas@hotmail.com

Megan Hatch
Cleveland State University, m.e.hatch@csuohio.edu

J. Rosie Tighe
Cleveland State University, j.l.tighe@csuohio.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://engagedscholarship.csuohio.edu/urban_facpub

Part of the Urban Studies and Planning Commons
How does access to this work benefit you? Let us know!

Repository Citation
https://engagedscholarship.csuohio.edu/urban_facpub/1468

This Report is brought to you for free and open access by the Maxine Goodman Levin College of Urban Affairs at EngagedScholarship@CSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Urban Publications by an authorized administrator of EngagedScholarship@CSU. For more information, please contact library.es@csuohio.edu.
How Criminal Activity Nuisance Laws Can Hurt Victims of Domestic Violence

Joseph Mead, Assistant Professor
Marissa Pappas, MPA Candidate

- More than 40 Ohio cities and villages have Criminal Activity Nuisance Laws that permit the eviction of tenants when police or emergency medical services respond to an “excessive” amount of criminal activity occurring on a property within a set time period.
- Municipalities vary in their definition of “excessive” and the length of the given time span, although it can be as low as a few isolated incidents over a year or longer.
- About half of these cities have laws that explicitly include domestic violence as an offense that triggers a nuisance designation.
- Cuyahoga County has a particularly high concentration of nuisance laws. In November 2016, 15 jurisdictions had nuisance laws that included domestic violence as a listed nuisance activity.
- Because the nuisance label applies to the property, treating calls for domestic violence as a nuisance places individuals who are victimized in their home at risk of a forced eviction.
- Advocates have criticized similar laws across the country as being discriminatory, unjust, and in violation of the Federal government’s Fair Housing Act.

Cuyahoga County Municipalities That Include Domestic Violence in Their Public Nuisance Ordinance

Legend:
- Domestic violence offenses are included as a public nuisance
- Domestic violence not included in public nuisance ordinance
- Had a domestic violence component of nuisance law that was repealed since 2016
- No public nuisance ordinance

Prepared by:
Mark Horvitz, Cleveland State University
May 2017
Data Source: Prof. Joseph Mead, Maxine Goodman Levin College of Urban Affairs, Cleveland State University
(Current as of May 5, 2017)
Shaposhnik Source: US Census Bureau
• As part of a class project, a group of Cleveland State graduate students (Masters of Public Administration and Law) successfully lobbied for the City of Euclid to amend its law in December 2016 to remove domestic violence as a listed nuisance.

• As a result of the public attention the students brought to this issue, several other cities in Cuyahoga County are studying their nuisance laws. Lyndhurst and Maple Heights, for example, have recently amended their laws to protect victims of domestic violence.

• We are using the adoption and implementation of criminal activity nuisance laws in Ohio to better understand how local governments make policy choices, to look for racial or other disparities in enforcement, and to examine the relationship between housing stability and contact with law enforcement.

• We also plan to expand this study to understand how criminal activity nuisance laws affect victims and their families in both the long and short term.

Distribution of Ohio Municipalites with and Without Nuisance-Related Domestic Violence (DV) Ordinances