What is Urban Affairs?

It’s a wide and rewarding range of careers!

With a degree from the nationally-ranked Levin College, the only Urban Affairs college in Ohio, you can:

• Plan and improve cities/neighborhoods
• Lead nonprofit and community organizations
• Preserve the environment
• Manage government agencies
• Make cities safer

Read on and discover how real Levin students put their passion for urban revitalization to work.
KRITIKA is mapping out her future in urban planning and design. Real-world projects like community gardens demonstrate her skills in neighborhood engagement and how green space promotes healthy lifestyles.

Charlie energizes Cleveland by attracting new business and industry through his work in economic development. "I believe in Cleveland and that we can help realize its potential."

Green spaces. Healthy people.

Busy sidewalks inspire me.
CHRISSE
Future nonprofit leader. “I want to help people by providing services that improve their lives, contribute to society, and make our economy grow.”

BRYCE
works to attract commercial development that is balanced with people-friendly neighborhoods.

Never a dull day.

Thriving communities.
ERIN channels her passion for the environment into her own nonprofit group, Drink Local.Drink Tap. She has traveled to Africa to dig wells for impoverished citizens and continues to educate people on both continents on how to protect our precious water resources.

ANDREA is a housing manager in the St. Clair-Superior neighborhood of Cleveland. She loves making old houses new again and helping families find their affordable dream home.
Re-energizing urban communities.

JASON is a city planner for Lakewood. His job includes encouraging bike-friendly initiatives and helping business owners spruce up their storefronts (and their profits) through the city’s renovation program.

Envision what could be.

GREG learned to speak the language of a developer, an architect, and a planner so he can make a city a better place.

How can the city be more inviting, more beautiful? At Levin, GREG learned to speak the language of a developer, an architect, and a planner so he can make a city a better place.
