

A And then I observed the test tube and noticed that in about five minutes there started to appear a white line in between the junction of the two liquids in that test tube.

Q Now, when you say this white line appeared in between the junction of the two liquids, exactly what do you mean by that?

A I mean that the lower portion was the serum that was put in and the upper portion was the liquid from the test tube that was gently flowed on to that, just so that it wouldn't mix but just join together, one would be laying on top of the other. The serum being a heavier liquid, it would be at the bottom.

Now, we observed that after five minutes there would form what we call a precipitate, or precipitant, and this was observed by a white cloudy line appearing at that spot.

Q Now, had you performed that test before, sir?

A Yes, I have.

Q And what did that precipitant reveal to you?

A Well, it revealed that the blood -- that the liquid that I had added to the top of this serum contained human blood.

MR. PARRINO: I think I can adjourn, your Honor.

MR. DANACEAU: If the Court

please, we have a witness that we intended to have this afternoon. He has just arrived, and it may make unnecessary a session this afternoon if we could put him on the stand immediately, out of order.

THE COURT: Is there any objection?

MR. GARMONE: No objection.
Will that be your last witness today?

MR. DANACEAU: Yes.

THE COURT: I take it that this witness may be then excused for the day?

MR. DANACEAU: Yes.

THE COURT: All right, sir.

MR. GARMONE: Then we will recess for the day?

MR. DANACEAU: Then we will recess for the day, yes.

MR. GARMONE: That is all right with me.

THE COURT: Now, ladies and gentlemen of the jury --

MR. DANACEAU: The witness is here.

THE COURT: Yes, but I would like to say just one word.

MR. MAHON: All right.

THE COURT: We have a witness

from out of the city. I believe his testimony will be very brief. We have decided to adjourn a little early today because I am assuming that some of these nice ladies are housewives and they have some chores, as we farmers say, to do for tomorrow. If you will bear with us for a very brief period of time now, we will hear this witness and then adjourn until Friday morning. Is that agreeable to everyone? It will save us coming after the noon hour.

Thank you.
