10-23-1954

54/10/23 But Who Will Speak for Marilyn?

Cleveland Press

Follow this and additional works at: https://engagedscholarship.csuohio.edu/sheppard_maxwell_articles

How does access to this work benefit you? Let us know!

Recommended Citation

https://engagedscholarship.csuohio.edu/sheppard_maxwell_articles/14

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Newspaper Coverage at EngagedScholarship@CSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Articles cited in Sheppard v. Maxwell by an authorized administrator of EngagedScholarship@CSU. For more information, please contact library.es@csuohio.edu.
It’s perfect, you think at first, as you look over the setting for the Big Trial.
The courtroom is just the size to give a feeling of coziness and to put the actors close enough to each other so that in moments of stress the antagonists can stand jaw to jaw and in moments of relaxation can exchange soft words of camaraderie.

Modern enough for this “See-Here” age, with the microphone, the loud speakers on the walls, and the blazing lights for the TV cameras before and after court sessions. Yet somberly dignified enough to carry the authentic decor of the traditional court of justice.

Almost adequate, old-fashioned hanging light fixtures. Dark furniture. A high bench for his honor, the judge. So high that if he slouches a bit just his head is visible.

A bit of plaster has fallen from the ceiling over the clerk’s desk. The unpainted spot gives a touch of the dignity of age.

And on the floor at the end of the trial table a cuspidor. Ah, you think, only a master arranger would have remembered that.

“The cuspidor. Put it here.”
Perfect, you think at first, a masterpiece of setting the stage for the dramatic action of the Big Trial.

Then it hits you. No, there’s something—and someone—missing.

What is it? Who is it? Who’s still off stage? Waiting perhaps for a cue to come on.

In the hallway outside the courtroom you stop to talk to Detective Chief James McArthur.

“Here,“ he says, “are the statements and resumes of the witnesses. Here are the theories and details of the evidence found by dozens of detectives in weeks of work.

“There’s the complete story of Marilyn Reese Sheppard. How she lived, how, we think, she died. Her story will be told in the courtroom. Here is the complete story of Marilyn Reese Sheppard.”

And complete. Not a character missing. Ah, you think, how real, just like you would expect to see.

Then you realize how what and who is missing.

“Sure,” says the detective chief. “There always is. I’ll tell you.

“It’s the other side, the representatives of what in this case will be officially known as the corpus delicti, in other words, the body of the crime, in still other words—Marilyn Reese Sheppard.

“Then there’s no grieving mother—she died when Marilyn was very young.

“There’s no revenge-seeking brother nor sorrowing sister. Marilyn was an only child.

“Her father is not here. Why he isn’t, is his own personal business.”

What then, you wonder, will be the other side.

It will be there, Inspector McArthur reassures. He opens a thick brief case he will carry daily to the courtroom.

“Sheppard,” he says, “are the statements and resumes of testimony that will be given by state’s witnesses. Here are the theories and details of the evidence found by dozens of detectives in weeks of work.

“Here is the complete story of Marilyn Reese Sheppard. How she lived, how, we think, she died. Her story will come into this courtroom through our witnesses. Here is how it starts: Marilyn Sheppard, nee Reese, age 30, height 5 feet, 7 inches. Brown hair, hazel eyes.

On the morning of July 4 she was murdered in her bedroom.”

Then you realize how what and who is missing from the perfect setting will be supplied.

How in the Big Case justice will be done. Justice to Sam Sheppard. And to Marilyn Sheppard.