Husband Puts $10,000 Up for Slayer

Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard today offered a $10,000 reward for "the arrest and conviction of the murderer of my wife."

The announcement was made in a typewritten statement, signed in ink, distributed to reporters by his attorney, William Corrigan.

"I was severely injured when I was attacked by the person who murdered my wife and I am still suffering from shock and pain," the statement declared.

"I have never refused to talk to any authorities and give them all the information that I could."

Dr. Sheppard said he had "related the incidents as nearly as I could remember them" to Bay Village and Cleveland police, Coroner Samuel R. Gerber, a sheriff's deputy, and Bay Mayor J. Spencer Houk.

"I have lived an honorable life," he declared, stating he and his family had authorized their attorney to make the dramatic reward offer.

START QUIZ OF DOCTOR IN MURDER OF BAY WIFE

Four days after the murder, law enforcement officials today started questioning Dr. Samuel Sheppard about the brutal slaying of his wife, Marilyn.

The questioning came after a tense bedside debate at Bay View Hospital.

Adversaries in the verbal clash were William Corrigan, Cleveland criminal defense attorney retained by Dr. Sheppard's family, and Coroner Samuel R. Gerber.

Corrigan blocked a demand of Assistant County Prosecutor John J. Mahon that the injured Dr. Sheppard, recovering from neck wounds he claimed were suffered in a grapple with the maniacal killer, "come downtown" for interrogation.

When Dr. Gerber issued a subpoena commanding Dr. Sheppard's "forthwith" appearance at the Morgue for a formal coroner's inquest, Corrigan declared: "Absolutely not—this man is sick. He is in a hospital. He cannot be moved."

Then, Mahon reported, Corrigan agreed to "permit" questioning of his client in the hospital room "without a lawyer present, and for any length of time."

But actual start of the questioning was delayed while Corrigan and his co-counsel, Attorney A. Peters, conferred with Dr. Gerber for more than an hour outside Dr. Sheppard's hospital room door.

The coroner sent for another physician to examine Dr. Sheppard to determine if he could make a trip to either the Morgue or the Criminal Courts Bldg.

Waiting impatiently to start the interrogation was Deputy Sheriff Carl Rossbach, whose previous attempts to question Dr. Sheppard had been blocked by Corrigan and the osteopath's father and brothers, who operate Bay View Hospital.

Rossbach entered Dr. Sheppard's room earlier today to find Corrigan at the bedside. A few minutes later, the deputy stalked out and reported to Dr. Gerber. The coroner then signed the subpoena for Dr. Sheppard. "Serve it forthwith," he commanded.

But the service was prevented by Corrigan's intervention and conference with Dr. Gerber.

The dramatic development came immediately after Mahon took control of the murder investigation and issued an abrupt ultimatum:

"Dr. Sheppard must come downtown to the prosecutor's office 'voluntarily to make a statement concerning the crime.'"

"If the osteopath refuses, Mahon said, a coroner's inquest will be convened at the Morgue immediately, and Dr. Sheppard will be subpoenaed and compelled to testify."

Dr. Gerber, with a dozen subpoenas in his pocket, went out to Bay View Hospital in Bay Village to serve the ultimatum on Dr. Sheppard and his family.

"I'll subpoena the whole family if necessary," Dr.}

Verbal Clash between Coroner Samuel R. Gerber (back to camera) and Attorney William Corrigan, standing inside hospital room of Dr. Samuel Sheppard, whose wife was brutally murdered in their Bay Village home July 4.

Mrs. Jane Reese, step-mother of Mrs. Marilyn Sheppard, today said she has come to the conclusion that the county officials will clear up this horrible matter. She said she had no further comment on the delay in the probe of Mrs. Sheppard's death.

Also was to be questioned by police today.

Dr. Stephen Sheppard suggested that Sam Jr. be questioned by Bay Village Patrolman Fred Dreischman, who is acquainted with the boy.

This suggestion brought a retort from Mahon: "They're not going to dictate to us whom they want to talk to."

"Took It Pretty Hard"

Bay Village Sgt. Jay Hubach, who accompanied Dr. Sheppard to his wife's funeral, said the family had kept the conversation on subjects other than the murder. "He took it pretty hard," Hubach said. "He sobbed most of the time."

Dr. Samuel Sheppard, in a brief hospital room interview with reporters, said he wanted to give as much help as possible to officials seeking to catch the maniacal killer.

Before Dr. Gerber and Mahon interposed objections, Rossbach had arranged to "call Dr. Steve at 11 a.m. to "see if it would be all right to question Dr. Sam today."

Dr. Stephen Sheppard told reporters that the interrogations would be at his home, 19027 Inglewood Dr., Rocky River, and all newspapermen would be barred from the premises.

Dr. Gerber said the murder inquiry was "one of the most unusual cases" in his 19 years as coroner.

"Here is a witness surrounded and shielded by his own family of doctors," Dr. Gerber said. (Dr. Sheppard's father and two brothers, all osteopathic physicians, ran Bay View Hospital together.) "It's a situation that's got to be straightened out immediately."

Gerber said:

"This development came as a surprise to Dr. Stephen Sheppard, brother-in-law of the slain clubwoman, told reporters that his brother was eager and anxious to aid the investigation and was now physically able to withstand questioning.

He added that William J. Corrigan, prominent Cleveland criminal defense lawyer retained by the family, was "in complete charge from now on."

Mahon took over direction of the inquiry after a conference with Sheriff Joseph Sweeney, Bay Village Police Chief John Eaton and Deputy Sheriffs Rossbach and Dave Yettra.

At Mahon's request, Cleveland Homeide Bureau Detectives Patrick Gareau and Robert Schottke were assigned to the case.

Mahon said his order to "some downtown" voluntarily or to the Morgue under subpoena also applied to Samuel (Chip) Sheppard Jr., six-year-old son of the murder victim.

"In my 23 years of criminal practice, I have never seen such flagrant stalling as in this case by the family of Dr. Samuel Sheppard," Mahon said.

The stalling, he said, was in the refusal of Dr. Stephen Sheppard, the osteopath's brother, to permit the injured husband to be questioned except at times and under conditions dictated by himself.

"We have tried to be humane in this inquiry," Dr. Gerber said. "We expected cooperation from the family, but don't seem to be getting it. We'll have to use the strong arm of the law."

Dr. Gerber, Mahon and Rossbach wanted to have the murder victim's husband retell his story of how he was asleep on a downstairs couch, when he heard his wife scream, in the upstairs bedroom.

Dr. Sheppard said he ran up these stairs, to be assaulted by a man who struck him from behind. He said he later recovered consciousness and chased the intruder, engaging in another struggle in which he was injured.

What infuriated the investigating officials was the fact that, after Dr. Sam Sheppard attended his wife's funeral yesterday, he received a steady stream of callers in his hospital room—but the police were barred.

The callers included Attorney Corrigan and Arthur A. Peterslage, the family's lawyer.

Dr. Stephen Sheppard denied any interference with the investigation.

"If we were trying to interfere," he said, "we wouldn't have let anyone talk to him. But he's already been interviewed four times by the authorities, and told them everything he knew."

"Our chief concern is for his health. He's certainly been injured, having been knocked unconscious. He's confused and unable to remember much. He'll possibly be able to remember more after his condition improves."

"It's fantastic to think that we're trying to impede the investigation. We tried to pro-
